'Illegal'

The provincial government has spent money illegally on the Princess Marguerite and the Rent Review Commission, Liberal MLA Gordon Gibson charged Wednesday in the legislature.

Gibson said a government official has informed him the government received payments for salaries and supplies for the operation of the ferry from a private company called the B.C. Steamship Company.

Gibson said he was also told that two employees of the rent commission have been receiving payments but the legislative authority to continue paying their salaries expired March 31.

He asked Speaker Gordon Dowling to investigate the possibility of illegal spending by the government and take appropriate action if the allegations are found to be true.

Gibson, in raising the issue, said he considered it "a serious matter of privilege," and added "the only protection citizens of this province have is the control of expenditures by this house."

Premier Barrett today labelled Gibson's criticism as "dumb and academic."

"I find the criticism on the Marguerite (financing) is pretty astounding in that it comes from a Liberal member whose colleague represents the city of Victoria whose merchants will benefit from the purchase," he said.

"We had to move quickly to get the vessel in operation."

Barrett declined to confirm that some $40,000 was disbursed from a general account to cover supplies for the vessel. Specifics would have to be obtained from Resources Minister Bob Williams, he said, who was tied up in a meeting.

"You can say anything you want if you're against the Marguerite," said the premier. The provincial government faced the problem that the majority of businesses in Victoria were depending on revenue from its passengers.

Gibson said in the house that several thousand dollars have been channelled out of

Turner Queries B.C. Bank

By IAIN HUNTER
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Finance Minister John Turner indicated Wednesday that there is concern here whether the B.C. government has the constitutional authority to set up the proposed Savings and Trust Corp. of B.C.

He said in the Commons that his department is reviewing the attempt by Premier Dave Barrett to set up the institution which would have almost all the powers of a royal bank.

Although he said he doesn't have to consider whether to try to block the establishment of the corporation, he added that Ottawa's refusal to allow former Premier W.A.C. Bennett to set up a provincially-owned B.C. bank in the early 1960s would be a "weighty precedent" in such a consideration.

Sinclair Stevens (PC—York-Simcoe) asked Turner if he agrees with Barrett that the corporation is a proposed "comes within provincial constitutional rights."

"We are reviewing the situation but it doesn't become other than hypothetical until the bill establishing the institution is passed," the finance minister replied.

STRIKE LOOMS AT DOCKYARD

HMC Dockyard officials have been told by Dockyard Trades and Labor Council to expect the possibility of a strike in the 900-man ship repair unit of federal government civilian employees.

The national organization has members in naval dockyards on both coasts, for whom contract negotiations began in March and have proceeded to the conciliation board stage.

Victoria members took a strike vote this week but have not released the outcome. The step came on the heels of a report recommended by the group's negotiating committee.

Rugby Post to City Man

By MAX LOW
Times Staff

Don Burgess of Victoria is to be Canada's first full-time technical coaching director for rugby, the Times learned Wednesday.

The official announcement is expected to be made by sponsors Carling-O'Keefe during a two-day meeting in Toronto on Monday and Tuesday.

Appointment of Burgess,

who will be based in Victoria and who will be responsible for setting up a national coaching scheme, and of an Ottawa-based director (who will be named at a later date) follows the recent upgrading by Sport Canada of the game of rugby from second-class to a "first-class" sport.

Burgess, one of the country's most experienced players and coaches, was selected out of 47 applicants from Canada, New Zealand and Wales (including well-known Welsh coach Gwyn Evans).

A keen rugby statistician and historian who has written a thesis on the history of the game in B.C., Burgess has represented Victoria Crimson Tide, B.C. and Canada in the fullback berth. A fit 44, he still turns out regularly for Oak Bay Wanderers in Victoria Rugby Union matches.

He is president of the Victoria Union. He's on an overseas tour.

Burgess himself declined to confirm or deny his appointment but an official in the Saanich School District office confirmed that Burgess has been granted a one-year leave of absence from Parkland High School where he teaches.

The coaching job is initially a one-year appointment.

Eight-Year Shutdown Ends As Suez Canal Re-Opened

PORT SAID, Egypt — President Anwar Sadat reopened the Suez Canal today after an eight-year shutdown, hailing the waterway as a "tributary of peace and a channel of prosperity and co-operation among men."

But he said that the canal is also a reminder to "friendly people everywhere that cherished parts of Arab lands are still suffering under foreign occupation and Arab people are enduring the anguish of forced exile."

Egypt is determined "to perform the sacred duty of liberating these lands and recovering usurped Arab rights," he said. The ceremony marked the eighth anniversary of the 1967 Arab-Israeli war that closed the canal.

In Tel Aviv, Israeli Transport Minister Gad Yaacobi said Egypt has pledged, in writing, to permit Israeli cargo through the canal, and that a Liberian ship headed for the canal with sugar, for Israel will be "a test case."

Egyptian army went on to regain the northern half of the east bank and got the rest in a disengagement agreement after the October war.

The canal had been closed since Israel took the whole of the Sinai Desert up to the east bank of the 103-mile waterway in the June, 1967, six-day war.

LEGISLATION CUTS DRIVER PENALTIES

Fines for motorists caught driving without a valid driver's certificate will be reduced under legislation brought in Wednesday by Transport Minister Bob Strachan.

Under existing legislation people without valid certificates are subject to a fine not less than $250 or imprisonment for a period not less than three months.

The new bill—amendments to the Motor-Vehicle Act—will change the penalties to not more than $250 and not more than three months imprisonment.

Strachan said the legislation makes the fines "a little more realistic" and is part of the government's plan to phase out the certificates.

Apartheid Out in S-W Africa

WINDHOEK, South-West Africa (AP) — Officials announced today sweeping measures to abolish apartheid throughout South-West Africa.

New legislation will provide for admission of all races to hotels, restaurants and cafes and removal of "whites-only" and "non-whites" signs on all public buildings.

Dirk Mudge, a member of the ruling executive council, announced the changes before the all-white legislative assembly here.

The announcement marks the latest major effort to eliminate what has become known as "petty apartheid" in South Africa.

Significantly, officials in Windhoek, the capital, recently told visiting foreign correspondents that in some ways South-West Africa is a "trial run" for South Africa itself.

The move was viewed by observers in South Africa as yet another step if South Africa's campaign of detente to win friends in black Africa and ease racial tension in the subcontinent.

Mudge said the executive decided on the changes after a report by a study group appointed to investigate racially irritating laws in the territory.

Apartheid laws were brought to South-West Africa by South Africa which controls the mineral-rich territory under a mandate no longer recognized by the United Nations.

South Africa has promised to grant the territory independence as soon as the territory's 12 major ethnic groups meet at a conference to decide South-West Africa's constitutional future.

South-West Africa's population of 850,000 is made up of several African tribes, groups officially designated "colored" and the ruling minority of 105,000 whites.

Mudge said existing legislation will be altered "as soon as possible" to provide for the changes.

Mudge said it will be up to the owners of hotels, restaurants and cafes to decide whether they will cater to all racial groups.

He said owners of hotels and restaurants who decide to accommodate all races will be able to display a prominent sign outside their businesses stating that all races are welcome.

Owners who do not display such signs, however, would be required under certain circumstances to accommodate all races anyway, Mudge said.

Mudge said discriminatory signs will be removed from public buildings as quickly as possible.

CABINET TO RULE ON BIFFY

By IAIN HUNTER
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Transport Minister Jean Marchand is going to make the entire federal cabinet decide whether to remove pay toilets from federal buildings in B.C.

He acknowledged in an interview that he could, make the decision to make them free himself, but indicated he expects some controversy to arise over the question. Apparently he expects MPs from other parts of Canada to demand the same privilege.

"The ministers are going to be questioned on this and I hope we all give the same answer," Marchand said.

He indicated he is in favor of following the lead of the provincial government in introducing legislation to ban pay toilets, and making them free in areas of federal jurisdiction such as the Vancouver International Airport.

It is the practice of the federal government, he noted, to conform in matters such as this to provincial regulations.

"That means there will be a differential between B.C. and the rest of Canada," he added, "but that wouldn't be the first time."

The minister said it would be unwise for Ottawa to keep pay toilets in federal buildings because it would mean that B.C. residents "each time they pay would say 'this is the damn federal government!'"

Marchand admitted paying toilets don't generate much revenue for the federal treasury — "it's not a big matter," he said with a shrug.

Charities Share Onassis' Fortune

ATHENS (Reuter) — Christina Onassis, daughter and principal heiress of the late shipping tycoon Aristotle Onassis, said Wednesday that half her father's fortune, estimated at $1 billion dollars, will be donated to a welfare foundation.

Greek newspapers have reported that Miss Onassis inherited almost the entire estate of her father, who died last March. Provision was made for his three sisters, but not for his widow, Jacqueline, widow of assassinated U.S. president John Kennedy.

Source has also denied newspaper reports that Miss Onassis plans to marry into another Greek shipping family. They said she will devote herself to running her father's vast business empire and welfare activities.

CONSTANTINE ALLOWED BACK

ATHENS (UPI) — Deposed King Constantine and members of his family are free to return to the country he once ruled and run for public office.

Parliament on Tuesday reversed an earlier decision to bar Constantine and his relatives from holding elective or other public posts in Greece. A clause to this effect had been proposed by 20 members on the final day of debate on the country's new republican constitution and had won initial approval.

Constantine, 34, fled the country in December, 1967, after leading an abortive coup against the military dictatorship of Col. George Papadopoulos.

Marina Plan Floated

A proposal to develop a marina on the empty salt marshes behind Island View Beach produced a cool response from the chairman of the regional parks committee today.

The proposal comes from Gordon Ewan, former Saanich school trustee, who describes it as "just the germ of an idea" but one worth examining more closely.

In a brief he has presented to Central Saanich council, Ewan envisions the marina occupying about 40 acres, including a 20-acre lagoon, on regional parkland behind the Island View beach in central Saanich.

The low-lying land, subject to flooding, lies north of Island View Road and south of the Central Saanich Indian reserve.

Ewan's brief, which will be studied by a council committee and could ultimately be referred to the Capital Regional Board, notes there is a shortage of marinas in the region. A marina proposal for Tugoose Point, north of Island View beach, has been recently rejected by the provincial government.

Ewan suggests a lagoon could be scooped out from the low land behind the beach, water level could be controlled by a canal with locks to the sea, and with solid cribs developed around the lagoon, there could be berths for up to 1,000 boats.

The concept of developing otherwise unusable tidal flats or salt marshes for marinas is not new, he said. The development could include picnic facilities and open more room to the public.

He envisages it being operated by the regional board or by private enterprise under regional jurisdiction on a concession basis. And he anticipates it could pay for itself.

But Earl Pallister, chairman of the regional board's parks committee, said today he doesn't believe the region owns enough land behind the beach to make room for a marina, although it is trying to acquire more.

"I'm not for that type of development at Island View Beach," Pallister said, adding he doesn't believe the regional board should get into the marina business in any event.

Marguerite Funds 'Illegal'

aries and supplies for the ship have been handled, suggesting it was through a general government account.

"Curiously enough," he said, "the account has been reimbursed by the private company, B.C. Steamships Co. 1973 Ltd."

"It seems strange to me that public property should be operated by a private company," said Gibson.

Resources Minister Bob Williams had earlier announced the formation of the company to oversee operations of the vessel.

Government sources said the company's five-man board of directors set up May 5 includes Harry Tyson, manager of Princess Marguerite operations, Williams; resources deputy minister Norman Pearson, NDP MLA Jim Gorst (Esquimalt) and John Webster, also with the department.

"Financing arrangements contravene the fundamental freedom of control of expenditures of government by this legislature," said Gibson.

"The treasury board has no power to issue from consolidated funds, unless the government approves it by statute."

In the case of the Rent Review Commission, Gibson suggested salaries are being paid against the better judgment of senior officials responsible for disbursement of funds.

"Someone better start digging into this situation and find out whether officials were pushed around to save payment," Gibson said outside the house.

The commission's financing should be included in government spending estimates, he said.

Speaker Dowding said he "listened with great interest but certain questions have yet to be answered, including whether there is an entity owned by the Crown."

Also to be determined is whether the company is operating at a deficit and "draining consolidated revenue funds or not" and whether it is operating on receipts, or under a loan from trustees.

He promised an immediate investigation.

Asked today about financing of the Rent Review Commission, Attorney-General Alex Macdonald said there is legislation on the order paper which would continue the commission's financing for the 1975-76 fiscal year.

Legislation passed last year authorized expenditure of funds on the commission until April 1, 1975 and Macdonald said the new legislation would cover the period from April 1.

That legislation would "legitimize" funds spent on the commission over the last two months.

Macdonald said very little money is involved because the salaries of most of the people on the commission are accounted for under regular departmental estimates.

WATER-POWERED CAR ALMOST ON ROAD

PARIS (UPI) — An automobile engine running solely on water may soon become a reality, French inventor Jean Chambrin said Wednesday.

Chambrin arrived in Paris from his home in Rouen to demonstrate to a group of journalists that he has almost reached his goal.

He added, "I soon hope to devise an engine which runs on 100 per cent water."

Asked to describe how his system worked, Chambrin said he preferred to wait until he had completed his patent applications so that no one could steal his idea.

The engine runs on a fuel mixture of 50 per cent water and 50 per cent alcohol, he explained, "but I have a motor in my garage in Rouen which runs on 90 per cent water and 10 per cent alcohol."

"Everything has been tried for foster children... work farms, institutions, orphanages, children's villages—these fads come and go BUT for most foster children the best home away from home is a foster family."

And this is why the department of human resources program on FOSTERING is urging that you "make your next child one of ours."

Faith Magwood of the parent encouragement program says there is an urgent need now for placing children 10 years and over and for family groups of two or more.

Toward the goal of enlisting more foster parents there will be a film and discussion on fostering with social workers Donna Gau and Alastair Mont in the lounge of the Junction Centre Building, 1627 Fort, next Wednesday at 7:30 p.m.

So, if you've been thinking about becoming a foster parent or would like to know more about it... the time and the experts are available to answer your questions.

Latest figures show that on Feb. 28 of this year there were 907 children in care of the human resources branch. Of these 374 were in regular foster homes and 99 in permanent foster homes. The balance of 434 children were mainly in group homes, treatment centres and other places.

Since those figures were compiled, 26 children were placed in March and 44 in April.

The annual meeting of the COMMUNITY ACTION GROUP will be held Monday at noon at the group's office, 5514 Fisgard Street.

Director Susan Talbot will give a summary of the year's activities and there will be an election of officers for the coming year.

vice-presidents, secretary, recording secretary, treasurer and five members at large.

Planning must be the priority item facing the GORDON HEAD RATEPAYERS ASSOCIATION, it was decided at the annual general meeting.

Retiring president Barrie Goult says "we appreciate there is more than Gordon Head involved in this and that is why we spearheaded the formation of a federation of community and ratepayer groups in Saanich."

Goult says the federation will solicit the views of others and hopefully work together on matters that concern Saanich as a whole.

Goult added a strong recommendation that groups involved in developing their community plans have the services of a planner to provide expertise.

The Gordon Head group will be setting up a committee of volunteers to work on a community plan and to put forward their ideas to the region while the plan is being developed.

The association has more than 400 members, an increase over last year.

In elections, the new president is Earl Byrnes, vice-president is H. L. Stevenson; Fred Smith was re-elected treasurer; Eric Thomson is secretary with Cecil Archer as recording secretary; directors are Goult, Charles Goodman, Maurice Johnson and E. McAdam.

There is still a great lack of volunteers to help in publishing the Vic West newspaper, says editor Fellowes Hewett.

Hewett says he hopes to get the paper to the printers this week.

In other news the VIC WEST DEVELOPMENT ASSOCIATION is planning a dance for Saturday, June 14, at the Esquimalt Recreation Centre. Tickets are available from Hewett at 383-9261 or Mrs. Judy Clarke at 386-6634.

The ESQUIMALT-VIC WEST-VIEW ROYAL community advisory resource board will publish its own community newspaper starting in July.

Closing the Circle

Housing Minister Lorne Nicolson's amendments to the Renters Resource Grant Act mark the costly education of a new administration and bring full-circle an exceedingly bizarre chapter in the history of bribing the voters with their own money.

Our story begins with the elderly Citizens Renters Grant Act of 1972, an election-year gimmick of the former provincial administration which put $50 into the hands of every tenant over 65 in B.C.

When the New Democratic Party came to office, Premier Dave Barrett's first budget increased the amount to $80, and in 1974 he amended the legislation to apply across the board to renters of all ages. Housing Minister Lorne Nicolson's department advertised far and wide to get the province's estimated 200,000 eligible renters to apply.

Government and Business

A debate of sorts has been taking place in recent weeks concerning the respective roles of government and business. It's a debate that never really stops, but the abrupt switch of three Liberal MLAs to independent status on a straight free enterprise vs. socialism stand, Economic Development Minister Gary Lauk's outburst last week and a couple of public addresses have pushed the subject into the spotlight again.

The former Liberal MLAs, and Social Credit leader Bill Bennett, if you listen to their rhetoric, appear to believe that any government intrusion into the so-called private free enterprise sector is bad. Of course, neither group is about to call for the abolition of medicare or hospital insurance or the sale of B.C. Hydro and the B.C. Railway.

These are all areas where south of the 49th parallel, private enterprise holds sway. But the fact that electric utilities are mostly privately-owned in the U.S., and mostly public enterprises in Canada, hasn't made all that much difference in their operations and the problems they face. B.C. Hydro and Consolidated Edison are both massive, impersonal corporations,

It was less than a surefire success. Fewer than half of the renters eligible bothered to apply. The administration of the grant was a bit of a flop as well. The applications took months to process as some 25 summer helpers, hired specially for the job put all the information into a computer, along with the existing files on 50,000 elderly renters who had gotten the grant for the previous two years.

The idea was that the computer would automatically spit out renewal grant application forms annually, just like ICBC. But early this year, someone in the government looked at the figures on how many renters they were reaching and decided to scrap all the work done up to then.

In his 1975 budget speech, Barrett announced the renter's grant would henceforth be tied to income and eligible renters (that is, those earning under $15,000 gross income) would get a tax credit on their federal returns, up to a maximum of $100.

It's a sensible move, but at such a cost. All that money spent on ads and on processing grant applications and devising a computer program and keypunching all the material on more than 100,000 forms was wasted, it turns out now. Gearing the grant to need is only common sense, but did we have to pay for such an expensive education until somebody down there twigged to the right way?

Perhaps now the lesson learned will be applied in other areas and to other programs where a needs test only makes sense, as Mincome and Pharmacare and the homeowner grant. While they're at it, the finance department fellows might also start drawing up plans to eliminate some of the regressive taxes that grind most heavily on the poor, such as the sales tax.

Money Is Ford's Main Card

WASHINGTON — You have to blink when you read the news of foreign affairs these days. Almost every time you pick up the paper, somebody is telling the president of the United States what must do to regain the confidence of the world.

For example, President Sadat of Egypt said in an interview that he would seek financial aid from U.S. President Gerald Ford to help settle Egypt's large debts to the Soviet Union.

A few days later, 75 members of the United States senate sent a letter to Ford saying that they expected him "to be responsive" to Israel's request for $2.5 billion in military and economic aid in the next fiscal year.

Next, North Korea demanded that the United States withdraw its 40,000 troops from South Korea if it wants to avoid another humiliation like Indochina.

Finally, President Ferdinand Marcos of the Philippines held a lengthy meeting with U.S. officials in Manila and announced that his country would henceforth not depend on the temporary grace or favor of any other nations.

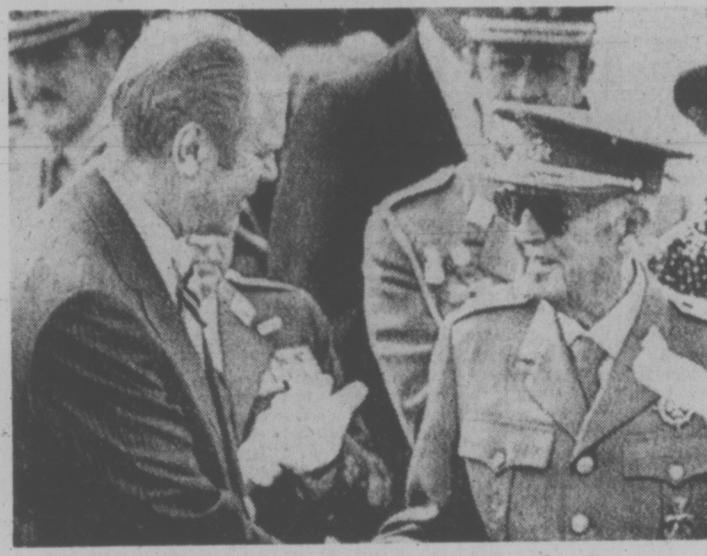

"It seems to me," Marcos said in an official statement, "that the recognition of this principle will help America regain its moral authority in the world and help heal the breach that has grown up between her and many developing nations."

Meanwhile, Ford is being told by his colleagues at the Pentagon that he must try to bring Spain into a closer alliance with the West or maybe even into NATO if he wants to keep U.S. bases in that country, and he is being urged by the Western allies that the best way to keep Portugal from going communist is to provide economic aid to the new military junta now ruling that country.

This would seem to be enough to try the patience of even so amiable a man as Gerald Ford and persuade him to stay home and concentrate on that long overdue reappraisal of what his policy should be, and before he has settled with Congress where its authority starts and where it ends in the conduct of foreign affairs.

As a result, he is under pressure from many sides mainly because he has not made clear where he stands or intends to stand in Europe, Asia or the Middle East. Even in this hemisphere, he is at odds with influential members of Congress on Panama, Cuba and many other issues.

The letter from 75 senators on Israel is only the latest example of a government undecided and divided about how to proceed. It was Ford's hope that he would be able to persuade Sadat of Egypt to make concessions for peace with Israel, but the 75 senators apparently felt that the best way to persuade Sadat was to indicate strong support for military and economic aid to Israel. Maybe it will work this way, but neither Ford nor Kissinger thinks so.

In any event, it is an odd way to conduct foreign policy. Israel, with the help of its friends in this country, is negotiating with congress as well as with the executive, and it is apparently pleased with the results.

Terence Smith of The New York Times reports that Israeli officials buoyed by the U.S. senate's support, have decided to ignore repeated U.S. requests that Israel produce new negotiating proposals before the Ford-Sadat meeting in Salzburg, Austria this week.

It was Ford's hope that such proposals would enable him to win concessions from Sadat and break the present deadlock, but both sides are now likely to be more intransigent than ever.

Accordingly, Ford's main card, wherever he goes, is money, a commodity in short supply around here these days. Doing it out under present conditions to help Egypt pay off the U.S.S.R., to support the present Israeli policy, and bribe Portugal is not likely to prove to be either good diplomacy or good politics.

(However, as the two leaders met, Israeli Prime Minister Itzhak Rabin announced a unilateral 50-percent reduction in Israel's troop, missile and artillery strength along the United Nations buffer zone, a move applauded by U.S. officials as a step in the right direction. And Ford announced the extension of bilateral aid to Egypt after meeting with Sadat, and said he would announce a Middle East peace formula later in the month.)

The president got some on-the-job training in Europe, and no doubt his reassurances all around were well received, but at some point he will have to make clear at home as well as abroad where his priorities are, and where he and congress are going to put the people's money.

China's Capitalism

In his May 26 column titled, Sex in Socialist Countries — Don't You Believe It, Jack Scott intimated that he, Shirley MacLaine and the people of China believe that socialism exists in that country. That probably equals or surpasses the number of people who at one time thought the earth was flat.

It is actually not so strange that in human affairs excluding class domination, that "believing" is a rare phenomenon. For instance, there is seldom such a thing as "believing" in how to drive a truck, operate a lathe, or perform any of the other myriad chores of production and distribution. This immense area of cranial activity is usually reserved for knowledge. But in the equally important social-political field, opinions or beliefs are in common, and invariably these generally reflect the profit interests of the owning minority everywhere.

No socialist government anywhere has come to power except via a coalition," he said. Decisions like this could be made only on the basis of "parliamentary circumstances and timing."

Eyes shut or open, one candidate at last was saying something different from the others. And what he was saying was the truth, even if it wasn't what the delegates wanted to hear.

Stanfield and Dave Barrett among others.

There was no noticeable interruption of Jack's stride as he contradictorily mentioned the mid-Victorian sex attitudes of "socialist" China. But that is exactly where China is today, in the early stage of capitalist industrialization. And if Jack read the Times of the following day, he might have noted the front page item about the $400 meal enjoyed by six U.S. newsmen in a gourmet restaurant, enough privileged fare momentarily to feed a poor family of five on the north side of the Chinese tracks for eight months.

And did Jack miss the piece from The Globe and Mail in the Times of Feb. 1 describing the high priced luxury eateries in China as opposed to the poor peoples' dives with "grubby" floors, pools of beer and food scraps sticking to the tables," open 24 hours a day and located near large factories? This is socialism?

Dr. Barry M. Richman's book, Capitalists and Managers in Communist China lists 300,000 capitalists in the People's Republic of China and there is much more evidence that can be used here to prove the capitalist nature of China to anybody who wants to transcend mere believing, in the political field. — J. G. Jenkins, 959 Darwin Avenue.

ROSEMARY BROWN
running slow third

The challenger is Nystrom. Brown started fast but disappointed some supporters by muting her feminism and she has lost momentum. Harney is easily the best platform performer but has been dogged by a reputation for laziness, the least-forgivable of all sins within the party.

What They Want

Because only 2,000 or fewer delegates' votes decide the issue, the imperative of every leadership contest in every political party is for candidates to tell delegates, as opposed to the public at large, whatever it is they want to hear. Among Liberals and Conservatives the key to the hearts and minds of delegates is the promise, "victory at the next election." Among New Democrats, the code that counts is "return to socialist principles."

Sadly, and it is symptomatic of the softness at the centre of the NDP leadership contest, Ms. Brown said that line, best her of the evening, off-stage. Listening, eyes shut, as the four main candidates said their say to 150 party members at the first stop by the travelling leadership troupe in the Atlantic provinces, it was quite impossible to tell any of them apart from any of the others.

Who Controls Immigration?

By SHEILA ARNOPOULOS
Montreal Star

About three weeks ago a special Joint Parliamentary Committee on Immigration started hearings to sound out Canadians on the immigration green paper.

Although Immigration Minister Robert Andras had said that he wanted Canadian views and opinion to be reflected in a new immigration act planned for 1976, he did not favor setting up a touring parliamentary committee.

Before the committee was organized, immigration civil servants set up closed meetings with organizations and individuals across the country to talk about immigration issues.

Andras and the cabinet did not want the public debate to go beyond that. It appears they did not want MPs touring the countryside holding publicized sessions and asking pointed or embarrassing questions which might focus on the real issues. They gave in only under pressure from the Liberal caucus.

Immigration, the movement, is a touchy controversial issue. Real problems and concerns could crystallize far more in the hands of inquiring MPs than with cautious civil servants.

In this preparatory period for a new immigration act, it is clear there is a war on between the MPs interested in immigration and the Ottawa civil servants.

Unfortunately, it looks as though the civil servants, who have more knowledge of how immigration can be cleverly manipulated through seemingly innocuous regulations, will win.

The reason for this is that most members of the parliamentary committee, which must make a report by July 31, do not have a sharp enough grasp of what the cold hard issues of immigration really are.

This was evident by the questions that committee members posed last month during the hearings in Montreal, Three Rivers, Sherbrooke and Quebec.

The MPs must realize, for example, that bringing in temporary workers to do jobs Canadians reject is one of the key issues. However, very few seem to understand the social, political, and even international ramifications of a temporary worker program. A number know nothing of the experience of the 10 million migrant workers Europe has imported to do its unwanted jobs.

It was only when the case of the Colombian weavers of Louiseville was talked about at length by witnesses in all four cities that it began to dawn on some of the committee members that maybe temporary workers might be a poor idea.

However, if the MPs aren't completely on guard, new legislation and regulations could be enacted allowing an escalation of the temporary worker program. Introduction in 1973 of temporary "work visas" came about by regulation. They should recall, not by legislation.

The race issue is another touchy question. If committee members are clearly against discrimination, then they must be aware of what type of legislation and regulations can be used to introduce discrimination through the back door.

Almost none realizes that the October immigration regulations which demand that prospective immigrants have a job or lose 10 points under the "points system" were not what they appeared to be.

The October regulations were billed as a reaction to mounting unemployment. However, unemployment and the present type of immigration flows are not clearly related.

They realize, for example, to what extent we have our favorite refugees . . . to what degree the politics of refugees affect Canadian acceptance? People with left-leaning leanings are less desirable to Canada than those with right-wing beliefs. One thousand Chileans were accepted with a lot of questions asked and many others were rejected. On the other hand, 4,000 Vietnamese are entering without interrogation.

If the joint committee is to compete with Andras and his department, it needs some wily research experts of its own to help define the issues and pose the right questions to witnesses at the current hearings.

The civil servants of the immigration department have some stubborn and not necessarily liberal ideas about immigration. Most of them live in Ottawa — semi-isolated from the rest of the country. They don't know much about immigrant communities or Canadian reaction to them.

The new immigration law must be spelled out in such detail that little is left to ministerial discretion. This is vital if immigration is going to reflect more the will of the people than the prejudices of the bureaucrats.

Unfortunately, although the civil servants have the tools to control immigration, they do not necessarily have very much understanding of what immigration is all about.

Most of them live in Ottawa — semi-isolated from the rest of the country. They don't know much about immigrant communities or Canadian reaction to them.

The MPs, especially those with ethnic ridings, have deeper understanding of the human side of immigration.

But to get the upper hand and to have a say in a future immigration act, they need a more sophisticated and critical grasp of the issues and the way policies can be enacted through legislation and regulation.

Canada's Saigon Exit Defended

By JACK CAHILL

(A letter to the editor of the Toronto Star. Cahill is Asian Bureau Chief of the Star and was one of the last reporters to leave Saigon before its surrender.)

I was personally concerned when I read belatedly a series of letters strongly critical of the timing and manner of the closing of the Canadian embassy in Saigon, particularly as they contained inferences that our foreign service officers stationed in that unhappy city were lacking in courage.

I have no way of knowing that would have been the reactions of the letter writers had they found themselves in the conditions prevailing in Saigon at the time, but it was my experience that our charge d'affaires Ernest Hebert and first-secretary Harry Adams went about their difficult business with a calm courage and efficiency in keeping with the best traditions of Canadian foreign service.

As to the timing of the Canadian diplomatic evacuation it seemed most reasonable or even a little late. Because of the political and military mess in the capital the Canadians were no longer able to perform their diplomatic duties. Therefore there was no reason for them to stay and subsequently risk the lives of Canadian service pilots or become a burden on the Americans.

No doubt Ottawa also made an accurate judgment that Saigon was about to fall and was politically unanxious to have a diplomatic presence in both camps.

I noted that my old and good friend George Hees kicked up a bit of a fuss in the Commons because some Canadian journalists stayed longer than the diplomats, but George must know that the two situations are not that simply comparable. Both groups stayed until their job was done. It was unfortunate for the journalists that their job took a little longer.

In summation there is absolutely no need for any Canadian to be ashamed of the performance of the Canadian foreign service officers in the field in Saigon. On the contrary there is reason for pride in their calm, although to a journalist often uncommunicative, efficiency, and in the bravery of other Canadians like immigration official Charles Rogers and Ontario government adoption official Helen Allen and Victoria Leach, who flew into Saigon at a time when the city's future was, to say the least, uncertain.

A DISCRIMINATING 'JUDGMENT CALL'

By SCOTT YOUNG
The Globe and Mail

Some immigration incidents aren't made public soon enough to have anything done about them — like one in mid-April, involving Peter Pierakos, a Greek-Canadian who has lived here since 1960 and is a Canadian citizen. He works as a waiter. In mid-April his father-in-law, John Mitrakis, 48, and sister-in-law, Helen Mitrakis, 18, arrived at Toronto International Airport from Sparta, Greece, hoping to visit for a few months with Pierakos, his wife, and their newborn son.

The two visitors were turned back by immigration officer P. Hearn, who wrote of John Mitrakis (also spelled Jean Mitraki) and Mitrakis here and there through somewhat sloppy documents: "In my opinion he is not a bona fide non-immigrant because I do not believe that he could afford a six-month trip to Canada (which he claims to have financed himself for he and his daughter) with his yearly income of approximately $800 per year. Due to the fact that he supports a family of four in Greece and has only one source of income." P. Hearn also wrote of Helen Mitrakis (sometimes her name was spelled Helene Mitrakis) that in his opinion she should not be admitted to Canada as a visitor because "she is a member of a family, accompanying a member of that family, namely her father, who is not admissible to Canada, and in my opinion hardship would be involved by separation of the family."

The net result was that these two people, relatives of a Canadian citizen who owns his own home and who offered to put up that home as a bond to guarantee that they would leave Canada when the visit was over, were sent back to Greece three days after their arrival. The $1200 they spent on air tickets ($700 by John Mitrakis and $500 by his son-in-law here) was a gross waste.

These are judgment calls by the immigration department, right? Like, they allow Alexander Solzhenitsyn to travel freely in Canada if he wishes, being a big wheel — but instead of giving John Mitrakis a medal for being thrifty enough to afford travel on his tiny income, they use his lack of income as a reason to turf him out of the country. (How many Canadian farmers also show a very small cash income each year, while being well off in capital assets?)

Stan Obodiac, publicist at Maple Leaf Gardens where several Greek-Canadian waiters are badly upset by the Pierakos experience, tried to phone Immigration Minister Robert Andras, after the Mitrakis pair had been sent home.

He couldn't get Andras, but an assistant to the minister, Obodiac said, gave the opinion, "These people are prone to not keeping their word." Oh? These people? Do we generalize like that?

Obodiac made rather a nice point later. "If my in-laws arrived from Scotland with only a few dollars in their pockets and announced they were going to stay a few months, and I guaranteed to look after them, would any immigration officer refuse to believe them, and me, and ship them back to Scotland?"

Answer is no. Not without starting the Third World War.

Nova Scotia Tick Talk

bruce

That's our story, anyway, and we're sticking with it.

Not that many people get a chance to refute it. Our ticks — like all tiny creatures who settle down on the human body — can be a mite embarrassing and, therefore, hardly any foreigners have ever heard of them. Why should we tell strangers?

Surely you don't expect us to run travel ads saying, "Discriminating ticks know that, if home is where the heart is, down home is where the blood is."

We live in Canada's Ocean Playground, and a frozen-cream pie. They down a bottle-and-a-half of Beaujolais, watch an old Dracula movie and, having thus absorbed the pleasant cultural shock of life in a foreign country, they dispose for bed.

And then, in the same flickering moment, they see the "things". They see these repulsive protuberances stuck in one another's bare necks and calves, these lumpy little posteriors with spider-legs, these vampires in insect-dom head-deep in their own flesh. She starts to scream.

Dumbly, he swats at the lumps. The tiny bodies snap off but the heads remain inside the human flesh. She screams and screams. They will always remember their first wonderful night in Canada's Ocean Playground.

To prevent such scenes, Kejimkujik National Park gives campers a yellow leaflet entitled "Tick Talk." If this sounds like the perfect name for a house organ in a clock factory, it also sets the carefully casual mood of the news that follows:

"Here in southwestern Nova Scotia we have a little animal called a 'tick'. They do not carry disease like some of their Western cousins but, if left on a person can cause some discomfort . . ."

"In case you discover a tick already embedded in your skin, do not be alarmed. Pull its body gently and slowly back, taking care not to leave any part behind, as infection could then occur . . . The park naturalist will be glad to answer your inquiries about the life cycle of this interesting animal."

Tick-wise locals suggest that, if you touch this interesting animal with a burning cigarette end or pour kerosene on it, the little blighter will remove itself from your flesh right smartly. But direct extraction probably does work best.

Enjoy your springtime camp-out in southwestern Nova Scotia. Do not be alarmed and, oh yes, be sure to pack your tweezers.

The ticks, of course, aren't really Nova Scotian at all.

They're Yankees and, just so no one will ever get the idea that anything so disgusting could possibly be naturally Nova Scotian (like the Mayflower), their official name down here is the American Dog Tick.

American sportsmen discovered our stupendous virgin wilderness around the turn of the century. They brought dogs with them; the dogs brought the ticks and, according to venerable tick authorities, a mother tick can lay 20,000 eggs. Apparently, a few of them did because the problem has been ticking along for at least 75 years.

Enjoy your springtime camp-out in southwestern Nova Scotia. Do not be alarmed and, oh yes, be sure to pack your tweezers.

Reap some benefits from all the cheques you write.

If you write ten or more cheques a month, consider a Commerce Key Account.

Because at 16¢ each, ten cheques already cost you $1.60. That's for the cheques you write, period.

But an extra 90¢ makes it a whole different story.

With a Commerce Key Account you can get a preferred rate on most consumer loans, (and that's a nice thing to remember). You can get this summer's travellers' cheques for no extra service charge.

You'll have an identification card which allows you to cash a personal cheque, up to $100, at any of our 1600 Commerce branches in Canada.

And that's not all. There is no service charge when you use 24-Hour Cash Dispensers, you'll get special cheques, money orders, domestic drafts, and a whole raft of other services.

All for a flat $2.50 a month. Or, in your case, maybe 90¢ more than you are paying now for cheques alone.

But hold on. We don't think everybody should get a Commerce Key Account. If you're not writing ten or more cheques you could be wasting your money.

And that's exactly what a Commerce Key Account doesn't want you to do.

A directory of community services and organizations has been compiled by the OAK BAY INTERIM ADVISORY COMMITTEE and is available to anyone who wants to know what is available and who to contact in the community.

The publication resulted from a survey under a Local Initiatives Project Grant when a researcher and interviewers who ascertained the scope of present services and what needs local residents wanted.

The advisory committee is hoping this book will be the tool to begin a process of community involvement through existing services and also through the informal channels of helping each other.

A permanent advisory committee will be elected next fall.

Members of the interim group are Mrs. Marilyn Callahan, Mrs. Linda Campbell, Dr. J. D. Galbraith, Mrs. Loanne Jones, D. S. McLeod, Mrs. Sonny Pollard, Dunc Russell and Mrs. B. F. Dane of the department of human resources.

Dr. Pam Duncan, University of Victoria psychologist, will speak on Treating The Retarded at the regular meeting of the JAMES BAY NEW HORIZON'S SOCIETY, Friday, at 10 a.m. in the hall of the James Bay United Church, 511 Michigan.

Vacancies are still available for the seven-day tour of the Rockies by members of the SILVER THREADS SERVICE, 4 Centennial Square, leaving June 20.

Interested senior citizens may make enquiries at 388-4268. The group will travel through the Fraser Canyon, stopping for the night at Kamloops.

The next morning they will travel to Johnston Canyon in Banff National Park and this will be headquarters for the next three days. During these three days visits will be made to the Columbia Ice Fields, Banff, Lake Louise, Radium Hot Springs, and many other points of interest in the vicinity.

On June 25 the group will leave Johnston Canyon for the return through the Okanagan, stopping overnight in Kelowna and arriving home early in the evening of June 26. Price of this tour is $94 — this includes ferry fares, bus and hotel accommodation.

A revised summer program and new incentive workers sparked a lively and productive staff meeting of the NEWTON RICHMOND COMMUNITY ASSOCIATION Tuesday. Susan Hamilton, the summer student worker, and Susan Priddy and Maurice Midlane, LJP workers have been doing a lot on the new schedule.

One highlight is the yoga classes to be held Wednesday night at the Boys Club. Drama classes directed by Todd McIntosh will now be held in the evenings on Mondays and Thursdays and the participants will learn basic stagecraft.

Plans are being formulated for a Bazaar and a major craft project.

As these projects all require some material, car washes and bottle drives will be an economic necessity this summer with the LJP grant funding ending July 5.

The response to the first coffee break discussions group last Thursday was good, reports Velma McIntosh, of the association. She added, "informal group discussions about raising chil-

The discussion groups will be held for the next four Thursdays.

Bikeway Pool Planned

Saanich, Victoria and Oak Bay will pool their technical staffs to work on plans for bikeways in their areas.

The need for co-operation was determined Wednesday when an initial working committee meeting was held at Saanich municipal hall. The meeting was arranged by Saanich Ald. Joe Bourque, who is spearheading a drive for cycle routes as a means of cutting down the rising number of cyclists injured and killed on roads and highways.

Victoria Ald. Mike Young warned it is important to determine that any routes created will have substantial use.

"Technical knowledge should be pooled," he said. "To put in a bicycle pathway at substantial expense in the hope that somebody might use it — and find they don't — could be the kiss of death."

Charles Barber, board member of the Victoria Branch, Canadian Planning Association of Canada, said his group has obtained funds that would allow two full-time researchers to carry out a three-month canvas to a real problem for the police."

Saanich's assistant parks administrator Gerry Chaster, who before coming to Saanich helped establish bicycle paths in Davis, Calif., said the California city demands that developers provide parking for both cars and bicycles. Out of a population of 30,000, Chaster said 25,000 used bicycles.

Saanich acting police Sergeant Bill Chisholm said his department had "been bending the law over the years when we visit schools and suggest perhaps the safest place (for cyclists) is on the sidewalks. The population of bike riders is rising continually and creating a real problem for the police."

The Motor Vehicle Act prohibits cycling on sidewalks.

Bill McIntosh, Saanich's assistant municipal solicitor, however, said this problem could be solved by municipalities designating sidewalks as bike lanes.

Saanich acting Mayor, Sandy Noel said many American cities, like Palo Alto, had turned sidewalks into bike lanes.

"We should encourage this — with some care. There may be some opposition, possibly from some senior citizens but it's a step in the right direction," Noel said.

CHESS TOURNEY SLATED

Forty to 50 entrants are expected to sign up for Victoria summer open chess tournament set for June 21 and 22 in Gordon Head recreation centre, 1744 Fetham.

Tables will be set up in the small meeting room and board room for match games in which $100 first prize is offered.

Organizer Gordon Campbell said other prizes will depend upon the entry list. A $10 registration fee is required, and participants must be members of provincial and national chess federations, which require fees of $9 for adults and $6 for juniors 18 and under.

Competition will take the form of a five-round Swiss with appropriate time limits.

Joyce Green Honored

Tributes were paid to Joyce Green Wednesday night on her retirement as supervisor of a section of the claims division of provincial Hospital Programs.

She had joined the B.C. Hospital Insurance Service in 1958 and was appointed supervisor of the accounts verifier section in 1967.

Earlier she had been in government service in Ottawa and Hydrodyne House.

A party of 55 attended a banquet in her honor at the Hydrodyne House.

A presentation was made by Nelson Wallace, director of finance for Hospital Services, after a speech by Vern Richards, supervisor of the claims division.

Also attending was Donald Cox, former deputy minister of the B.C. Hospital Insurance Program.

Consolidated Labor Law Planned for Province

The provincial government is preparing a new Labor Standards Code to modernize and consolidate all laws covering working conditions in B.C.

Labor Minister Bill King told the legislature today the act may be brought in this session but will not be considered for passage until the fall sitting.

There are about 16 different acts now on the books, he said, which deal with the working conditions of workers in the province.

Those acts, which cover areas such as minimum wages, hours of work, and holidays, are antiquated and not co-ordinated, said King, and many workers are not aware of the protection they are given under the law.

The consolidated legislation would be made more clearly understandable and updated, he said.

The department of labor is also looking at the board of industrial relations, he said, and studying the exemptions that it grants to certain workers.

PATRICIA'S CADETS TAKE RIFLE TROPHY

The small-bore rifle team of the Esquimalt-based 2483 Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry Cadet Corps has won the Flemnell competition of the Commonwealth Small-Bore Rifle Match Organizing Committee.

Open to all sea, air and army cadets in Canada, the competition is co-ordinated by the Dominion of Canada Rifle Association.

With this final win the local corps has scooped all others in competition available to them this year.

Victorian's ITU Waiting

Employees of the three-a-week Victorian newspaper are still waiting for the second session of resumed negotiations following the brief appearance of pickets at the Government Street premises two weeks ago.

International Typographical Union, certified to represent the staff, began picketing May 20 to protest publisher John Damgaard's layoff practices and the absence of productive bargaining.

After several days the union agreed to withdraw pickets on condition that an immediate investigation of the ITU's unfair labor practice allegation be carried by the Labor Relations Board.

The LRB is continuing its examination of the complaint that Damgaard laid off 11 employees last September and had since hired others to do their work.

It was also agreed that negotiations be resumed immediately before the LRB, or its representative, with realistic bargaining to take place.

The ITU insisted that there be no recriminations against printers who had taken part in the picketing, and that a member of the union's bargaining committee dismissed by Damgaard be considered laid off until she is recovered from illness and able to return to work.

Because of the circumstances, the union considered laid off members locked out, entitling them to picket. Damgaard sought LRB intervention to end what he considered an illegal picket line.

CAMPER LICENCES TO ALTER

The provincial government is abolishing municipally-issued exemption licences for camper vehicles.

Under amendments to the Municipal Act introduced in the legislature Tuesday the plates, for drivers who must buy commercial plates for their vehicles but don't use them for commercial purposes, will disappear.

Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer said municipalities had thought the exemption plates would be a revenue-raising proposition but the bureaucracy of issuing them had proved more than they were worth.

He said that probably beginning next year people will just buy ordinary licence plates unless they use their vehicles for commercial purposes and the onus will be on them to buy the right kind.

Trial Delayed

A scheduled two-day jury trial in county court was adjourned Wednesday to the fall sitting when the accused failed to appear.

Larry Allan Preston had been charged with two counts of breaking, entry and theft from the King John Inn at Colwood last November.

Court was told Preston was in Victoria General Hospital.

His trial was to have been held May 7 and 8 but he failed to appear and court was told he was in the emergency department of Chilliwack General Hospital after falling down some stairs.

A warrant for Preston's arrest was ordered Wednesday when he is released from hospital.

Others on the team included cadets Ian Whitehead, Tim McDowell, Rick Chan, Phillip Bramhill, C. Jackson and Ray Clear. All team members were awarded gold medals.

Second-place winners and recipients of silver medals were cadets on a team from the 694 La Mauricie Cadet Corps of Shawinigan, Que.

Second-place winners and recipients of silver medals were cadets on a team from the 694 La Mauricie Cadet Corps of Shawinigan, Que.

The company through its representatives will appear in Duncan court June 16.

The federal environmental Protection Service laid the charge against the company following a fuel spill which took place at the Crofton mill dock Aug. 9.

Dutch Priest Unfrocked

UTRECHT, Holland (Reuter) — Cardinal Bernard Alfrink, Roman Catholic Primate of Holland, has unfrocked a 51-year-old priest said by a church court to have allowed women to perform priestly functions.

The letter said that talks with Father Kotte had not led to a solution of the problem and that the priest had persisted in repeating his own ideas.

In a similar incident in the United States, an ecclesiastical court today found the Rev. William Wendt of Washington guilty of constantly misleading the faithful by suggesting that he had the approval of the Pope, that the Dutch bishops were not lawful or not in communication with the Vatican, and that he himself had been appointed by God and confirmed by the Holy See as leader of the people of God.

Gouzenko Sues Lawyers

TORONTO (CP) — Igor Gouzenko, a former Soviet embassy cipher clerk who revealed in 1945 that a spy ring was operating in Canada, appeared in court Wednesday where he is suing four lawyers for general damages of $2 million.

Gouzenko wore no hood, as he usually does when testifying before courts or inquiries because of fear of Soviet retaliation. Justice Allan Goodman ordered no photographs be taken or sketches made of the man.

In addition to the $2 million, Gouzenko is seeking damages of $3,894.54 and costs.

He alleges the four defendants, R. A. Harris, Edward H. Luck, Roland W. Thurston and D. H. Conrad, were negligent in the prosecution of an action for libel he launched against Sinnott News Co. Ltd., Lew L. Callaway and Newsweek Inc. after Newsweek Magazine published an article about him Feb. 24, 1964.

The action was dismissed for want of prosecution and Gouzenko says he was deprived of a cause of action for which he claimed damages of $1.6 million. He says he was first a client of Luck and Harris, and later went to Thurston and Conrad to pursue the case.

Gouzenko's lawyer, F. R. Bowman, said until the 1950s, his client was treated as a hero, but in mid-1955, a series of libels began.

Retired B.C. Surveyor Dies at 67

Adrian Wolf-Milner, one of Salt Spring Island's best known residents, died Monday in Lady Minto Hospital 10 days after suffering a heart attack. He was 67.

A provincial land surveyor, he had lived in Ganges for 29 years.

Born in Manchester, England he came to Canada with his parents at the age of two. The family settled in North Vancouver where he received his early schooling.

He attended the Royal Military College in Kingston and University of British Columbia, graduating with a degree in civil engineering.

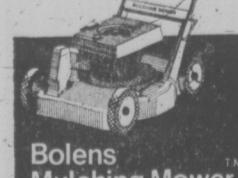

After a two-and-a-half years as surveyor in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, he returned to B.C. and became a provincial land surveyor, working throughout the province.

In 1939 he went back to South America as surveyor for a petroleum company in Ecuador. Three years later he returned home and joined the Royal Canadian Engineers with whom he served in Canada and overseas until the end of the Second World War.

In 1946 he and his wife Louise moved to Ganges and into a home built by his parents in 1931. He set up a surveying practice, and retired in 1971.

Wolf-Milner is survived by his wife who will continue to live at Ganges and three sons, Terrence, 32, chief pilot of Bristow Helicopters in the Shetland Islands; Patrick, 28, an air traffic controller with the Canadian Forces at Shearwater, N.S.; and Brian, 24, a student surveyor in Burnaby.

Before The Judge

Jail sentences rather than the usual fines were given for the first time in Victoria provincial court Wednesday to two men who pleaded guilty to defrauding the Unemployment Insurance Commission.

Sentenced to 14 days in jail were Thomas Eng, 23, of 1020 Empress Avenue, and Michael Moran, 22, of 7 Boyd.

A UIC official said Eng received $363 from the commission between April and December of 1974, and Moran $651 between August of 1974 and February of this year by telling the commission they were unemployed when they did have jobs.

Alan Paterson, defence lawyer for Eng, told the court Eng was having problems paying his bills as he was being sued by a car rental agency for damages after a car accident.

Paterson said deterrents and rehabilitation of the accused as well as protection of the public would be served by a fine alone.

The UIC official said, "It is true false statements against the commission are getting more rampant but were not pressing for incarceration."

Judge Douglas Campbell, however, said fines would not serve the public interest.

"I find deterrents to people contemplating defrauding the commission should be considered," Campbell said.

Both Eng and Moran will be serving their jail terms on weekends. They are also placed on six months probation.

Campbell sentenced a 30-year-old man to 60 days in jail in what Campbell called a unique case of defrauding two local banks.

"This is a very sophisticated type of crime where you have used your knowledge of the banking system," Campbell told John William Stott, of no fixed address.

Stott, who holds a Bachelor of Commerce from the University of Toronto and has taken graduate level business courses, pleaded guilty to two charges of fraud.

Prosecutor Peter Birkett said Stott had opened a bank account at the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, 1517 Douglas, April 29, depositing $5. Stott then went to the Oak Bay branch of the Canadian Imperial Bank, 2241 Oak Bay Avenue, where he cashed a forged $400 cheque drawn on the Toronto-Dominion Bank in Edmonton, made payable to him. He asked that the $400 be deposited in his account at the Douglas St. bank branch. He then went to the Douglas St. branch where he withdrew $300.

Birkett said Stott repeated the offence using the Bank of Nova Scotia at Douglas and Yates and the bank branch at 2212 Oak Bay Avenue.

In total, he fraudulently received $485.20.

"You have an extremely good education and background so you don't have the excuse many do . . . I don't know what the problem is but the community has expectations of a person of your calibre," Campbell said.

Stott is also wanted on a Canada-wide warrant for fraud, issued in Ottawa, and is facing breach of probation.

"I'm doing you a favor by setting you a jail term because you'll be held in custody in any case until an Ottawa escort arrives," said Campbell.

Stott was given a year to repay the banks and was placed on 18 months probation.

"But I still have about $2,000 to repay in Ottawa," Stott complained.

"That's your problem," the judge said.

Peter Kamann, 19, of 86 Howe, who pleaded guilty to common assault, was fined $500 and placed on six months probation.

Birkett said police saw two cars stopped at the red light at the Douglas-Fisgard intersection. Kamann got out of his car and started hitting the driver of the vehicle next to him. Police asked both men to get on to the sidewalk, but Kamann continued to strike the man. Kamann said the dispute began more than a year ago when the other man "took off at me with a baseball bat."

"He lipped me off a few times . . . I told him I didn't have to take that and I didn't," he said.

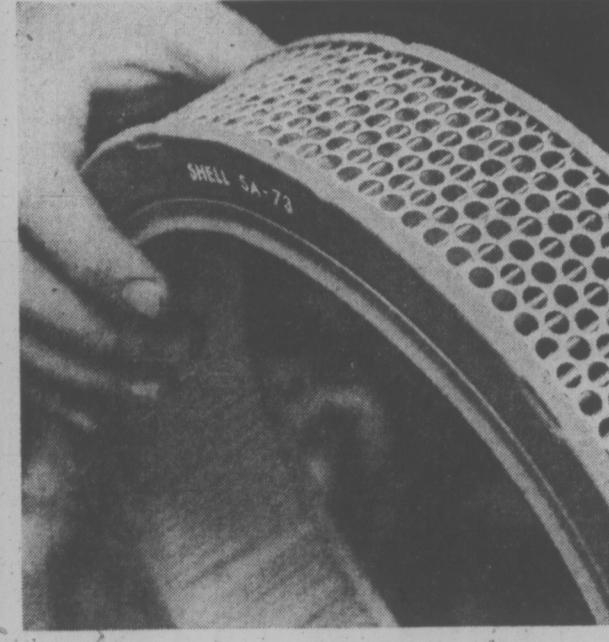

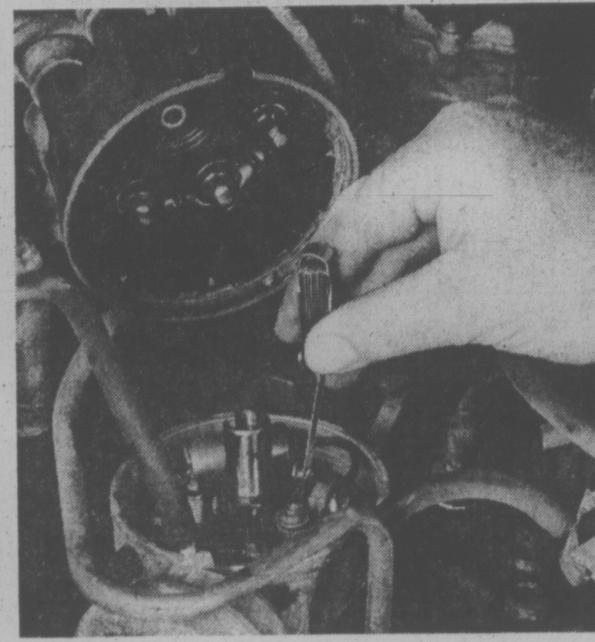

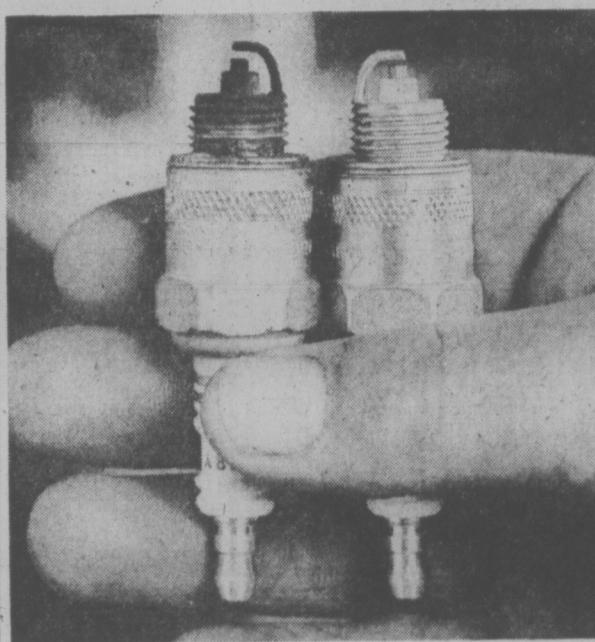

Campbell asked if assault was the answer.

"Well, he was verbally assaulting me," Kamann answered.

Campbell said he was levying the maximum penalty because "I feel strongly about this type of behaviour."

Tune up for good mileage at Shell this summer

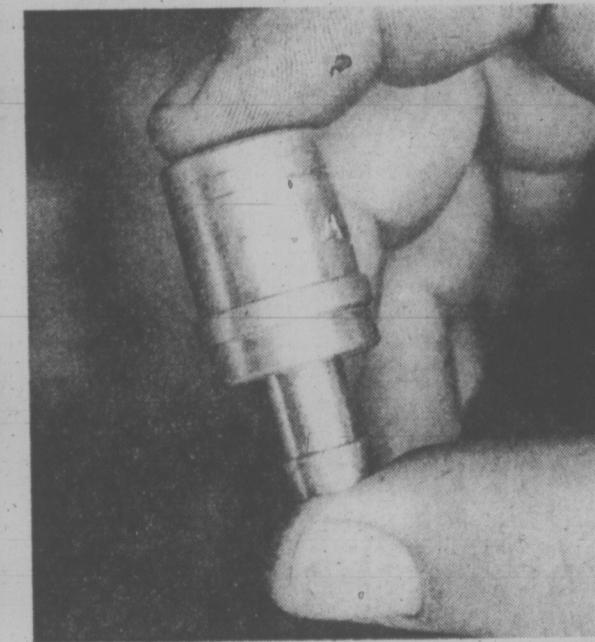

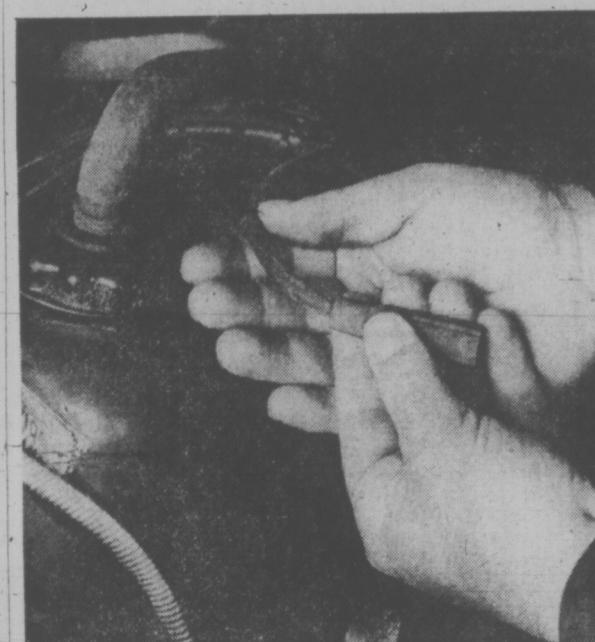

For gasoline economy and for good performance, ask your Shell dealer to check the following items:

Spark plugs. Just one faulty spark plug can cost you as much as 2 miles per gallon and could damage a catalytic converter. You should ask your Shell dealer to check, regap or replace them at every tune-up. (Also, regular use of non-leaded Shell Ultra helps spark plugs last twice as long.)

Ignition points. At sixty miles per hour, they open and close about 300-times a second. When they wear out, they waste fuel. Ask your Shell dealer to "check the points" at tune-up time.

Air Filter. If it's really dirty it acts like a choke on your engine and can cut mileage by as much as one mile per gallon*. Ask your Shell dealer to check it and, if necessary, replace it with a clean Shell air filter. (Note: If your summer driving takes you on dirt roads, check your filter at every fill-up.) *A.P.I. booklet "Gas Saving Tips"

Spark plug wires. If they get cracked and wet or greasy, they can "leak" voltage. And that means improper ignition and wasted gas. Your Shell dealer will check them over for you.

PCV Valve. If it ever gets clogged, you'll have poor engine performance and economy. It's very easy to check, quite inexpensive to replace.

Tire pressure. One of the most common causes of poor mileage. And so easily fixed! Check your tire pressure often, but most especially before a long summer trip with a heavily loaded car.

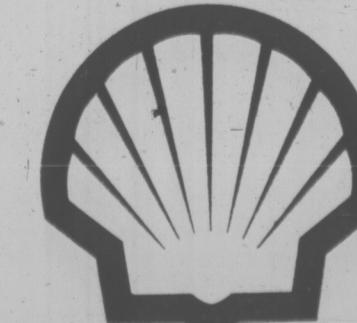

When you tune up for good mileage, you do more than save money. You help conserve Canada's energy too.

Timing. Proper ignition timing is absolutely vital to gasoline economy. Rough idling is one indication of this problem. Bring it to your Shell dealer's attention when you come in for a tune-up.

Carburetor. Any problem with this item is sure to affect your mileage. In late model cars with complicated emission control devices, carburetor settings are particularly critical. Ask your Shell dealer to adjust them to your car manufacturer's specifications.

NICOLSON 'AN OUTLAW'

Liberal leader David Anderson Wednesday branded Housing Minister Lorne Nicolson an "outlaw," charging the minister is breaking his own laws by turning down $30 resource grant applications.

"We hear complaints about the lack of respect for law in the province," said Anderson. "Well it starts at the top." Tenants are requesting (renters resource) grants provided by law and they are being refused."

"The minister deserves censure," said Anderson during debate of the Renter's Resource Grant Amendment Act which wipes out the $30 renters grants for tenants under 65.

Anderson criticized the minister for making the legislation retroactive to June 1.

He said the bill is retroactive to protect the minister for acts that are not in accordance with the existing law.

Nicolson said 5,000 applications for the grant have been turned down by the housing department in advance of the provincial government's new formula giving tenants up to $100 tax credit to ease rental costs.

Renters are being told to wait and file for this year's financial assistance on their income tax form. Tax credits, under the new proposal, would be geared to income and allow a tenant with a $4,000 salary to claim $100.

The credit system would not apply to those with incomes of $15,000 a year or over.

Nicolson said just under 200,000 renters in B.C. received the $30 resource grant last year.

Under the amendments, renters over 65 will be eligible for their $80 resource grant this year, and can also file for the tax credits on income tax forms.

Southern MLA Don Phillips said the minister shows the same "sloppy habits of his colleagues" for ending the grant system before introducing its replacement formula.

He said Nicolson has misled the public by not giving them advance warning.

Although the new formula was forecast in the government's budget speech — "many people didn't get a chance to read the budget," said the South Peace MLA.

Nicolson replied: "You talk about lack of respect for the law. It's hard to stomach accusations when opposition MLAs treat the law of the legislature with such disrepect they continually get thrown out of the house."

He said the new program should be supported by the opposition because it gives renters an increase, from $30 to $100 in funds to bathe the high cost of rental accommodation.

The bill was approved in principle.

Bennett: Gov't $ Shortage

Opposition leader Bill Bennett charged Wednesday government departments are using "political propaganda" to justify cancellation of contracts.

The departments, he said, are saying contracts have to be cancelled or cut back because the government's $3.2-billion budget has not yet been approved by the legislature.

Contracts with Sira Transport Ltd. of Penticton were cut back from 120 to 15 by various departments, said Bennett, and the reason given was lack of funds.

Nicolson said just under 200,000 renters in B.C. received the $30 resource grant last year.

Under the amendments, renters over 65 will be eligible for their $80 resource grant this year, and can also file for the tax credits on income tax forms.

Southern MLA Don Phillips said the minister shows the same "sloppy habits of his colleagues" for ending the grant system before introducing its replacement formula.

He said Nicolson has misled the public by not giving them advance warning.

Although the new formula was forecast in the government's budget speech — "many people didn't get a chance to read the budget," said the South Peace MLA.

Nicolson replied: "You talk about lack of respect for the law. It's hard to stomach accusations when opposition MLAs treat the law of the legislature with such disrepect they continually get thrown out of the house."

He said the new program should be supported by the opposition because it gives renters an increase, from $30 to $100 in funds to bathe the high cost of rental accommodation.

The bill was approved in principle.

"I suspect they have a shortage of money. Debate in the legislature is not the real reason."

The opposition leader asked Premier Barrett in the legislature if $573 million approved in an interim supply bill to tide the government over until the budget is finally approved — has run out.

Brett said he would take the question as notice, meaning he will answer it when and if he chooses.

But Brett said the premier was quick to make reference to the opposition leader's recent speaking campaign.

"I understand the slogan was 'not a dime without debate,'" he quipped. "So I advise you to write a letter and tell them (Sira) where the problem lies."

Outside the house Bennett speculated the real reason for the contract cancellations is a shortage of revenue, but this was described by Barrett as nonsense.

The bill was approved in principle.

Compensation Act Care Urged for All

Liberal leader David Anderson suggested Wednesday all people in the province be given the same medical care and benefits included under the Workers' Compensation Act.

The rehabilitation facilities of the Workers' Compensation Board are far by the best in the province, said Anderson, and they should be available to all people in B.C.

Moreover, he said, there is no reason why all citizens couldn't also receive the accident benefits and disability pensions now offered to workers under the act.

Housewives now receive no benefits if they are injured while working at home, he said, but domestic workers suffering from the same accident would be covered.

Labor Minister Bill King said later the suggestion is interesting but it would involve a whole new structure and concept.

Anderson was speaking during second reading approval to the Workers' Compensation Act which will include fishermen in the compulsory provisions of the law.

Members from all sides of the house expressed support for the concept and second reading received unanimous approval.

COMMITTEE TO WORK ON RIDINGS

Premier Barrett said Wednesday an independent committee will be established to work through the summer on redistribution of electoral boundaries.

The committee, he said, will report to the legislature and legislation introduced during the fall session.

He was responding to queries in the legislature by Liberal MLA Gordon Gibson (North Vancouver-Capilano).

BENNETT... had report.

Municipal Fund Legislation

Legislation confirming new municipal funding programs promised by the government was introduced in the house Wednesday.

Local governments will receive $20 million from natural gas exports and $6.8 million in catch-up population grants in addition to the $64 million in regular per capita grants this year.

The $90.8 million total funding is about 40 per cent more than the $66 million in per capita grants given municipalities last year.

The new funds were promised in the budget speech in February.

Under the Natural Gas Revenue Sharing Act, introduced by Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer, the government "may" share with municipalities one-third of the additional revenues accruing to the province from increases in the export price of natural gas.

This year, with export gas prices set to increase from $1 to $1.60 per thousand cubic feet in August, the local governments have been promised at least $20 million from the additional revenues.

The gas revenue will be distributed among municipalities under a formula worked out with the Union of B.C. Municipalities.

The formula will see each municipality receive a basic support grant plus other grants based on the relative operating costs of each local government; based on the annual increase in new housing units in the area; and based on special disparity situations.

Funds will also be granted for water assistance programs and for waste disposal plans in regional districts.

Strachan Accused of Misleading

Opposition leader Bill Bennett accused Transport Minister Bob Strachan Wednesday of making misleading statements to the public last year about potential Autoplan deficits.

He made the accusation following a three-hour public accounts committee meeting which studied the finances of the Insurance Corporation of B.C.

During the long, often testy meeting, ICBC general manager Norman Bortnick confirmed that a document in Bennett's possession was an official report prepared by ICBC in July 1974.

The report indicates that ICBC had originally projected a $15 million deficit but by July realized the loss would be more likely around $30 million by the end of the 1974-75 fiscal year.

In the fall, however, Strachan said ICBC's deficit would be minimal.

Bennett repeatedly asked Bortnick if Strachan had seen the report and therefore knew about the real loss projections.

Bortnick said the minister is kept aware of projections but many financial estimates were made during the first year, several conflicting with the report under discussion, and Strachan may not have seen that particular report.

Bennett said later it is clear that ICBC knew well in advance it would suffer a $34 million deficit. (That fact was made public last month when the annual report was published.)

While Bennett refused to accuse the minister of intentionally trying to mislead the public, he said the situation is clear and the public will "make the obvious conclusions."

The public accounts meeting, which marked the first time ICBC has come under the all-party committee's scrutiny, was interrupted by several bouts of tempers as government members complained the opposition members were taking up too much time.

Independent MLA Garde Gardom (Vancouver-Point Grey) was permitted to sit on the committee, with only one NDP member dissenting, as a replacement for Independent seatmate Pat McGee, who was expelled from the legislative precinct Tuesday night and could not attend the meeting.

Part way through the meeting, ICBC member Bob Shelly (Port Alberni) proposed that members only be able to question witnesses for 10 minutes on the first round and five minutes on subsequent rounds. The motion was passed unanimously.

Also during the meeting, ICBC spokesman E. L. Jones said the corporation has hired a large staff to edit and handle errors in claims and premium applications.

People were first hired last summer and at one point 200, at salaries averaging $7,000 to $8,000, were working on errors, said Jones.

Probably about 100 are still working, he said, but the problem of errors has improved since last year.

Out of almost 2.5 million applications put through the computer last year, 600,000 to 700,000 were rejected because of mistakes, he said.

Also during the meeting, the committee learned:

—ICBC pays more than

$88,000 a month for office space rental at the Royal Centre in Vancouver.

—ICBC is looking into the possibility of getting into the business of selling salvagable auto parts which are now auctioned to auto, body and auto-wrecking shops.

financial estimates are taken within the corporation.

Committee chairman Alex Fraser also ruled Gardom out of order because the committee is not allowed to examine accounts during the current fiscal year.

League, Branches Strive for Peace

CALGAR Y(CP) — The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association and the Western Canada Hockey League failed again Wednesday to settle a long-standing series of disputes but both sides agreed unanimity might be reached June 26.

WCFL officials and presidents of the four western branches of the CAHA met for several hours Wednesday and each side adjusted its bargaining position on matters of finance, branch transfers, franchise shifts and development money.

The four WCFL representatives—Del Wilson of Regina Pats, Scotty Munro of the Canadian Centennials, Ernie (Punch) McLean of New Westminster

Bruins and Bill Burton of Lethbridge Broncos—agreed to take their modified approach to other owners before the June 26 meeting in Lethbridge, which will follow the WCFL annual meeting.

Frank Spring of Cranbrook, B.C., president of the British Columbia Amateur Hockey Association, and Jim Scouler of Calgary, Alberta association president, agreed after the meeting that some progress was made Wednesday.

But they said that if the WCFL does not soon become a full-fledged CAHA member, the Western Canada major junior circuit should be instructed to operate independently.

Scouler said a decision "we can live with" must be made this summer. He insisted the feud between the CAHA and the WCFL must end soon for the benefit of hockey on all levels.

To give them credit, WCFL officials probably had to run roughshod to get started and reach the success they've had. Now, I think they're ready to stop running roughshod."

Scouler and Spring both said the WCFL has not paid an adequate amount to the CAHA or the four western branches for development of players. Scouler said the WCFL must accept an obligation to contribute both to development of prospective professionals and to recreational opportunities for other youngsters.

Ed Chynoweth of Saskatoon, WCFL president, was reluctant to disclose what went on during the closed-door meeting but said he was "more than pleased" because I expected to be" because a sound basis for further negotiations had been established.

Chynoweth said his league "recognizes our obligations." Describing the meeting as "a form of collective bargaining," he said the WCFL delegation moderated its view on the five major issues proposed by the CAHA branches for discussion "because we don't have a simple, immediate answer that would give a better way to operate amateur hockey."

Both sides refused to discuss specific financial positions, but Spring accepted the agreement for a future meeting as "what we've been looking for."

"We don't want to break anybody."

Chynoweth said he was sure the WCFL owners on hand here can sell the new WCFL position to other league members and Scouler and Spring believed provincial directors would accept a new position, as well.

"We are not as far apart as we were," said Scouler, who added that one major issue concerned fees to be paid for players developed by provincial associations and polished in the WCFL for eventual delivery—sometimes at a high fee—to professional clubs.

The WCFL says the professionals aren't willing to pay enough for graduating juniors," said Scouler. "We are willing if the WCFL will accept the same attitude towards us—that they aren't paying enough either."

Bridgman Ready But 'Not Signed'

Philadelphia Flyers said Wednesday they have an agreement—but not in writing—with Mel Bridgman, their No. 1 draft choice, who has denied he was signed by the National Hockey League club.

"He has agreed to terms," said Joe Kadlec, the Flyers' director of public relations. "He'll be here sometime this week to sign."

Tuesday, Bridgman said in Victoria: "I'm not signed and I haven't agreed to terms. I was also drafted in the first round by Denver of the World Hockey Association."

Kadlec said an agreement was worked out Tuesday night with Bridgman himself.

Bridgman, 20, a six-foot 185-pound centre, led the Western Canada Hockey League in scoring with 66 goals and 81 assists in 66 games during the 1974-75 season while playing for Victoria Cougars.

Bays Holding Inside Track

After two days of eliminations, defending-champion Oak Bay appears to have an inside chance of retaining its title in the Greater Victoria junior high school track and field championships.

Oak Bay has qualified 65 athletes in the finals, which are scheduled to run from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Friday at Centennial Stadium.

Arbutus, runner-up last year, is second with 60 qualifiers. Lansdowne is third with 52 and the St. Michael's University School-Norfolk House combined team, entered for the first time, is fourth with 45.

The defending champions also grabbed an early points lead by recording a first and third in pole vault final, the only ones held to date.

Rick Hagedorn of Oak Bay won the junior pole vault with a record-breaking leap of 3.16 metres. Stan Bell of Shoreline also cleared the same height but needed more attempts and was placed second.

Paul Hawkes of Central vaulted a record 2.79 metres to win the midget division title. Murray Atkin of St. Mi-

Soggy Grounds Interrupt Softball

Wet grounds forced postponement of all games in two leagues Wednesday.

Stuffy McGinnis Men's League play at both Sooke and Central parks will be rescheduled and an exhibition game between Seaboard Construction of the Stuffy McGinnis league and Victoria Bates of the Pacific Coast league was also called off.

In Vancouver, a double-header slated in the Pacific Coast League, between New Westminster Royal Towers Blues and Vancouver Magicians, will have to be played later this season.

Elsewhere, play carried on as usual.

Webb and Trace topped Metro Toyota 9-6 in a Heywood Men's League game at Heywood Avenue Park; Esquimalt 10-1 Hygrade Radio blanked Ingram Hotel 4-0 and Y-Not Holdings 9-4 in Victoria Senior Women's League action at Hyacinth Park; Harvey's Sporting Goods edged KODA 7-6 in a Sidney Men's Association struggle at Sanscha Park.

Terry Painter picked up the mound win after relieving starter Wayne Krimmer with the score tied 4-4 in the fourth inning.

Today, Gorge meets Greaves and Friday Farmers play Gorge in a makeup game. Sunday's doubleheader, however, has been postponed so the league can send an all-star squad to the B.C. Festival tournament at Vancouver.

A BREAKAWAY IN FOOTBALL

The 30 junior football teams, which include Victoria Dolphins and their rivals in the B.C. Big Four League, in Canada have broken away from the Canadian Amateur Football Association (CAFA) and have formed the Canadian National Football League (CNFL).

Ron Docherty of Vancouver, western commissioner for the new league, said Wednesday that the league has been approved by all provinces and will be governed by the 30 junior teams.

"We (junior football) just had to get away from the umbrella of the CAFA," he said. "It just wasn't a healthy situation."

The Western Lacrosse Association is suffering from a dreaded sporting disease — few fans.

For whatever reasons, people on the mainland have decided lacrosse is as inviting as a bout with measles.

The outlook is brighter in Victoria but Shamrock club officials haven't yet been reported as jumping with joy at attendance figures.

There are possible remedies, however.

One is to have former Wimbledon champion and renowned tennis hustler Bobby Riggs show up at every game with his bag of quips, highjinks and tennis know-how.

The other is to have the home team play its best game of the year and score enough pretty goals to keep everyone happy — until the next contest.

That's what happened Wednesday at Memorial Arena before 3,533 fans, the largest WLA crowd this year.

Riggs joked and clowned around in a light-humored match against Victoria's Jean Shaw and Ann Graham, which he won 5-0, and he offered

some good tennis in dousing

Tony Simmett of Victoria 9-5 in a $1,000 challenge match.

"Sugar Daddy" didn't steal the show from the Shamrocks, though.

Losers of three of their four games prior to Wednesday night, the Irish displayed the most powerful offence Victoria fans have witnessed in years in clubbing Coquitlam Adanacs 25-9.

"It's been a long time since

I can remember us scoring that many goals in one game," said Shamrocks' team captain Ranjit Dillon after the game.

Victoria coach Archie Browning, back behind the bench after missing Tuesday night, is Victoria's best hope.

"We were running from the start and we haven't done that lately," he said. "We also started clicking early in

Phillies Win Shoving Match

By The Associated Press
San Diego's Bill Greif played hit-and-run against Philadelphia Phillies but slugger Greg Luzinski wasn't playing.

The Padres and the Phils enlivened their game with an exchange of beanballs Wednesday night. First Greif hit Philadelphia's Dave Cash in the sixth. Then Tug McGraw threw close to San Diego's John Grubb in the seventh. When Greif fired one over Luzinski's head in the bottom of the seventh, the big outfielder charged the mound. "I hit him a few times," said Luzinski. "He ran looking for help. What I said to him isn't printable."

Both teams emptied their benches, there was a lot of milling around and shoving, but the only casualty was Padre third baseman Ted Kubik who caught an elbow on the head.

The umpires, surprisingly, decided not to kick anyone out of the game.

"They were two people wanting each other," explained plate umpire Doug Harvey. "Just let 'em go at each other. We surrounded the group looking for cheap shots. A cheap shot and the man goes."

No one went. Philadelphia won the baseball game 7-2.

Elsewhere in the National League, Pittsburgh Pirates beat Cincinnati Reds 2-1, Los Angeles Dodgers blanked Montreal Expos 3-0, New York Mets defeated Houston Astros 1-0, St. Louis Cardinals beat Atlanta Braves 5-2 and San Francisco Giants' outslugged Chicago Cubs 10-8.

The Dodgers were held hitless through seven innings at Montreal and wound up with just two safeties on the night. They got all three runs in the fifth off Dennis Blair, 2-7, who left after five frames despite not allowing a hit. A hit batsman, two walks, two wild pitches and a sacrifice fly accounted for the winning rally.

Andy Messersmith, 8-2, pitched an eight-hitter.

In the American League, John Blue Moon Odom, fighting with Cleveland's front office for a salary increase, added weight to his argument by tossing a two-hit 40 shutout over Kansas City Royals.

Odom, traded May 22 to the Indians from Oakland A's, was immediately unhappy with the salary paid him at Cleveland. He claimed that the Indians have to make up for playoff and World Series money he might get with baseball's defending champion A's, which amounts to about $8,000. Odom had been with the A's in their last three championship years.

Odom said that if the Indians don't cough up the money, he may leave Cleveland.

In other American League games, Boston Red Sox edged Chicago White Sox 7-6, Texas beat Baltimore Orioles 3-2 in 12 innings. New York Yankees defeated Minnesota Twins 6-3, California Angels edged Detroit Tigers 2-1 and Oakland beat Milwaukee Brewers 11-3.

Suddenly...The House Was Gone

CHICAGO — Bill Villavasso, a carpenter, left his job Tuesday and headed for the house he had been fixing up for two months.

But when Villavasso got to the site, there was nothing but rubble. The house had been torn down by the city.

"There was nothing there. Just mud, just a muddy, empty lot," Villavasso told a newspaper columnist.

"I couldn't believe it. I could not believe my house was nothing but mud," the distraught carpenter said.

Villavasso, 49, had purchased the house from the department of housing and urban development in March for $2,500 and set to repairing it. He said he had already put about $3,000 in materials into the house, not counting his labor. He said he worked dutifully after work and on weekends fixing the house so he, his wife and their two teenage children could move in.

City building commissioner Joseph Fitzgerald said the razing of Villavasso's house was just one of those mistakes that happen.

SELMA, Ala. — Selma Mayor Joe Smithers is asking his town's citizens to observe the 31st anniversary of the Second World War Friday by not smoking for the day.

American Cancer Society officials said the mayor, who smokes, named June 6 stop-smoking day and along with other Selma smokers signed the society's pledge card saying he wouldn't smoke this Friday.

$100,000 UNCLAIMED

TORONTO (CP) — A Toronto lottery ticket worth $100,000 still has not been claimed, says Gisèle Richer, vice-chairman of the Ontario Lottery Corp.

Mrs. Richer said in an interview Wednesday night that the ticket, one of two $100,000 prizes drawn during last week's second provincial lottery draw, may not have been sold and may still be held in a sealed envelope by a seller.

Other possibilities, she said, are that it is lost, held by someone who isn't aware of its value, or purchased by someone from outside Ontario who has not yet heard which number won.

She said a ticket seller would not know if he or she held the winning ticket unless the seller gambled and purchased the sealed tickets.

Indians Keep Rail Blockade

FORT ST. JAMES (CP) — A spokesman for the Stuart-Trembleur Lake Indian Band said Wednesday that the band's blockade of the British Columbia Railway north of here will continue until at least June 15.

Danny Alexis said at this community 75 miles northwest of Prince George that the fence blocking the B.C.'s line passing through the band's property will remain until the band gets satisfaction from the government in its dispute with the railway.

The blockade caused the closure Tuesday of the Silvacan Resources Sawmill on Takla Lake, 100 miles north of the disputed right-of-way. About 120 employees of the mill were indefinitely laid off.

Meanwhile, in Vancouver, Fred House was re-elected Wednesday as president of the British Columbia Association of Non-Status Indians but will not get his annual salary of $17,000.

House sought and received support for the rejection of all federal government funding by the provincial organization that represents 60,000 Indians. He will receive expense money as he did previously.

Under the new policy, staff will work without government funds at little or no pay.

Doris Rommenberg, who campaigned against rejection of government funds, was elected vice-president of the association.

KELP-EATING SHEEP URGED ON B.C.

VANCOUVER (CP) — A British expert says a rare Scottish sheep would be ideal to raise in British Columbia, and he'd like to import some.

Lawrence Alderson, technical consultant to Britain's Rare Breeds Survival Trust, made the comment Monday to members of the University of B.C. animal science department.

He said that the North Ronaldsay sheep, considered an endangered species, is found only in the Orkney Islands, off the north coast of Scotland.

Alderson said the sheep eat nothing but seaweed, and the

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — A union spokesman said Wednesday Seagram's apparently has decided to discontinue its B.C. distillery operations but a company spokesman denied this.

Keith Sheedy, president of the Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Union, Local 604, said "it will be a great loss as other distilleries who are willing to operate within the B.C. law and accept proper labor relations will undoubtedly expand to fill the gap."

Plant manager Bob Johnson said the company "has no desire to move out of the province. It wants to stay in B.C."

* * *

* * *

SURREY (CP) — Surrey Mayor Bill Vande Zalm said Wednesday the provincial government has not consulted Surrey officials about its idea of storing natural gas underground in the municipality.

"This seems to be the place where they put all their oddball proposals," Vande Zalm said. "What irks me is that they make all these proposals and never consult me."

COURT SQUEEZES 'LEMON' DEALER

BURNABY (CP) — A British Columbia Supreme Court has ordered a car dealer to refund the full purchase price of a 1974 car that had chronic malfunctions.

Court was told that Western Pacific Tank Lines Ltd. paid $8,258 for a 1974 Chrysler New Yorker from Brentwood Dodge Ltd. The car was bought for company president John Axen.

Mr. Justice K. E. Meredith noted that among other problems, the temperature gauge didn't work, doors didn't open properly, power cruise control failed, windshield wipers were activated by the headlight switch and vice versa, the radio malfunctioned, the tape-deck wouldn't change channels and the handle fell off the right front door.

The judge said that none of the defects was serious enough to take the car off the road, but "I think the plaintiff was entitled to expect that the car, including the luxuries with which it was equipped, would be operational or at least capable of operation."

Court was told the car was returned to the dealer to have defects corrected. However, after this was done, several problems reappeared, and others began.

The car was finally returned to the dealer and abandoned there.

Village Tax Base Tripled by Mine

FRASER LAKE (CP) — Mayor Earl Skands of this village 100 miles west of Prince George said Wednesday the provincial cabinet has approved inclusion of the Endako Mine and the 14 miles of road to it within village boundaries.

Skands said the move will triple the village's tax base and allow improvements in fire protection, the arena and sewage facilities. The mine previously provided the $350,000 arena and helped with the sewer and water systems costs.

Frozen Food Strike Ends

WELFARE FRAUD

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — The wife of a North Vancouver man who became embroiled in a dispute with his municipality's welfare department last year was convicted Wednesday of fraud involving more than $6,500.

Mrs. J. Angus Philip was found guilty of having defrauded North Vancouver City between February, 1971, and accumulated time off for every 40 hours worked, up from two hours.

The workers went on strike at the beginning of March seeking the $1.50-an-hour raise.

Settlement came only a week after the British Columbia Federation of Agriculture appealed through Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich for government intervention.

It came quickly with the assistance of mediator Charles Stewart as agricultural officials worried about new crops piling up on old crops caught in the company's three Greater Vancouver freezers.

Frozen crops include peas, beans, corn, strawberries, and raspberries.

Hydro Switches Poles

British Columbia Hydro has surprised the provincial forest industry by placing an order for 5,000 concrete power poles.

The poles, to be delivered later this month, will be erected on an experimental basis in Kamloops and in the Vancouver area.

They are expected to become general across B.C. within a year.

While the forest industry was surprised by the announcement, it was not necessarily dismayed.

A spokesman for MacMillan Bloedel, the main supplier of wooden poles, said most of the 50,000 it produces annually at its New Westminster plant are exported to other Canadian provinces and to the United States. The demand for wooden poles is strong in both export markets.

B.C. Hydro said there were many good reasons to convert to concrete poles in the land of forests.

Concrete does not rot and it can be produced in varying heights. Wooden poles are cut in standard sizes.

In addition, B.C. Hydro has on occasion been faced with a shortage of wooden poles. At present, orders for wood must be made one year in advance.

The concrete poles are being produced by Spun-Cast Concrete Ltd. of Kamloops.

The concrete poles are hollow but weigh about three times as much as a wood pole of the same size.

A 45-foot wood pole ranges from $125 to $225, depending upon the type of wood. A concrete pole of the same size is about $220 but less expensive in the long run because it lasts longer.

Western red cedar has been the preferred type of pole because of its resistance to the elements. B.C. Hydro has also used hemlock, larch and Douglas fir.

Because it is in demand, cedar tends to be expensive and in short supply.

A cedar pole has a life expectancy of 25 years. If it is treated, its life could be doubled.

B.C. Hydro buys 40,000 poles a year to add to the 550,000 already in use. A growing proportion of these new poles will be concrete.

Rot at ground level is a constant problem for wood poles. MacMillan Bloedel has acted to solve this problem by treating poles with salt, which preserves them (and turns them green).

However, the best-treated wood pole is not expected to last as long as the new concrete poles.

MP Says CBC Employee Sold Files to Russian

OTTAWA (CP) — A Progressive Conservative MP said Wednesday that a senior Canadian Broadcasting Corp. employee earned hundreds of dollars compiling files on Parliamentary Press Gallery members and MPs.

Tom Cossitt (Leeds) said the files were made for Konstantin Geivanov, a reporter for the Communist party newspaper Pravda Ottawa correspondent for two years.

He went home on leave in September and the external affairs department said in January that he was not being allowed back because of activities unrelated to his work as a professional journalist. It gave no details.

Cossitt said the employee was not, and is not now, a press gallery member.

He was unsuccessful in getting the necessary unanimous consent from the Commons to move a motion on the allegations.

The motion would have asked Prime Minister Trudeau to make a statement giving full details "of any involvement with ... Geivanov by a senior CBC employee, including the name and position of that employee."

The motion also would have asked the names of MPs and reporters on whom the files were made "in return for large sums of money."

Also sought was a full explanation why the employee should continue to hold a "sensitive CBC position where public opinion can be influenced."

Cossitt told reporters the employee had admitted — to the RCMP — compiling the information which Cossitt said he assumed was sent to Moscow.

The files contained details of personal behavior and biographical information, said Cossitt.

Cossitt declined to name the CBC employee.

Geivanov, whom Cossitt said now is in the Middle East, was Pravda Ottawa correspondent for two years.

He went home on leave in September and the external affairs department said in January that he was not being allowed back because of activities unrelated to his work as a professional journalist. It gave no details.

No Decision On Quang Deportation

OTTAWA (CP) — The government has not decided whether to deport former South Vietnamese Gen. Dang Van Quang, Immigration Minister Robert Andras said Wednesday.

"We are continuing to compile and analyze the information on Gen. Quang," Andras told Derek Blackburn (NDP-Brant) in the Commons.

"There are many potentially legal complexities in this case which do not lend themselves to a simple and easy decision, but I expect to make a decision shortly."

The former general entered Canada in mid-May from a United States refugee camp on a one-year ministerial permit. Several sources have alleged he was linked with widespread corruption and narcotics trafficking in Vietnam.

PRIVATE BILL ON FIREARMS INTRODUCED

OTTAWA (CP) — All firearms would be licensed under a private bill introduced in the Commons on Wednesday by Stuart Leggatt (NDP-New Westminster).

Introduction of his bill came one day after Solicitor-General Warren Allmand said compulsory registration of all firearms might not be the answer to gun control.

Private bills introduced by MPs or senators rarely are passed by parliament.

Leggatt said his bill would require licensing of all firearms. Handguns now must be registered but rifles and long shotguns currently are exempted from registration.

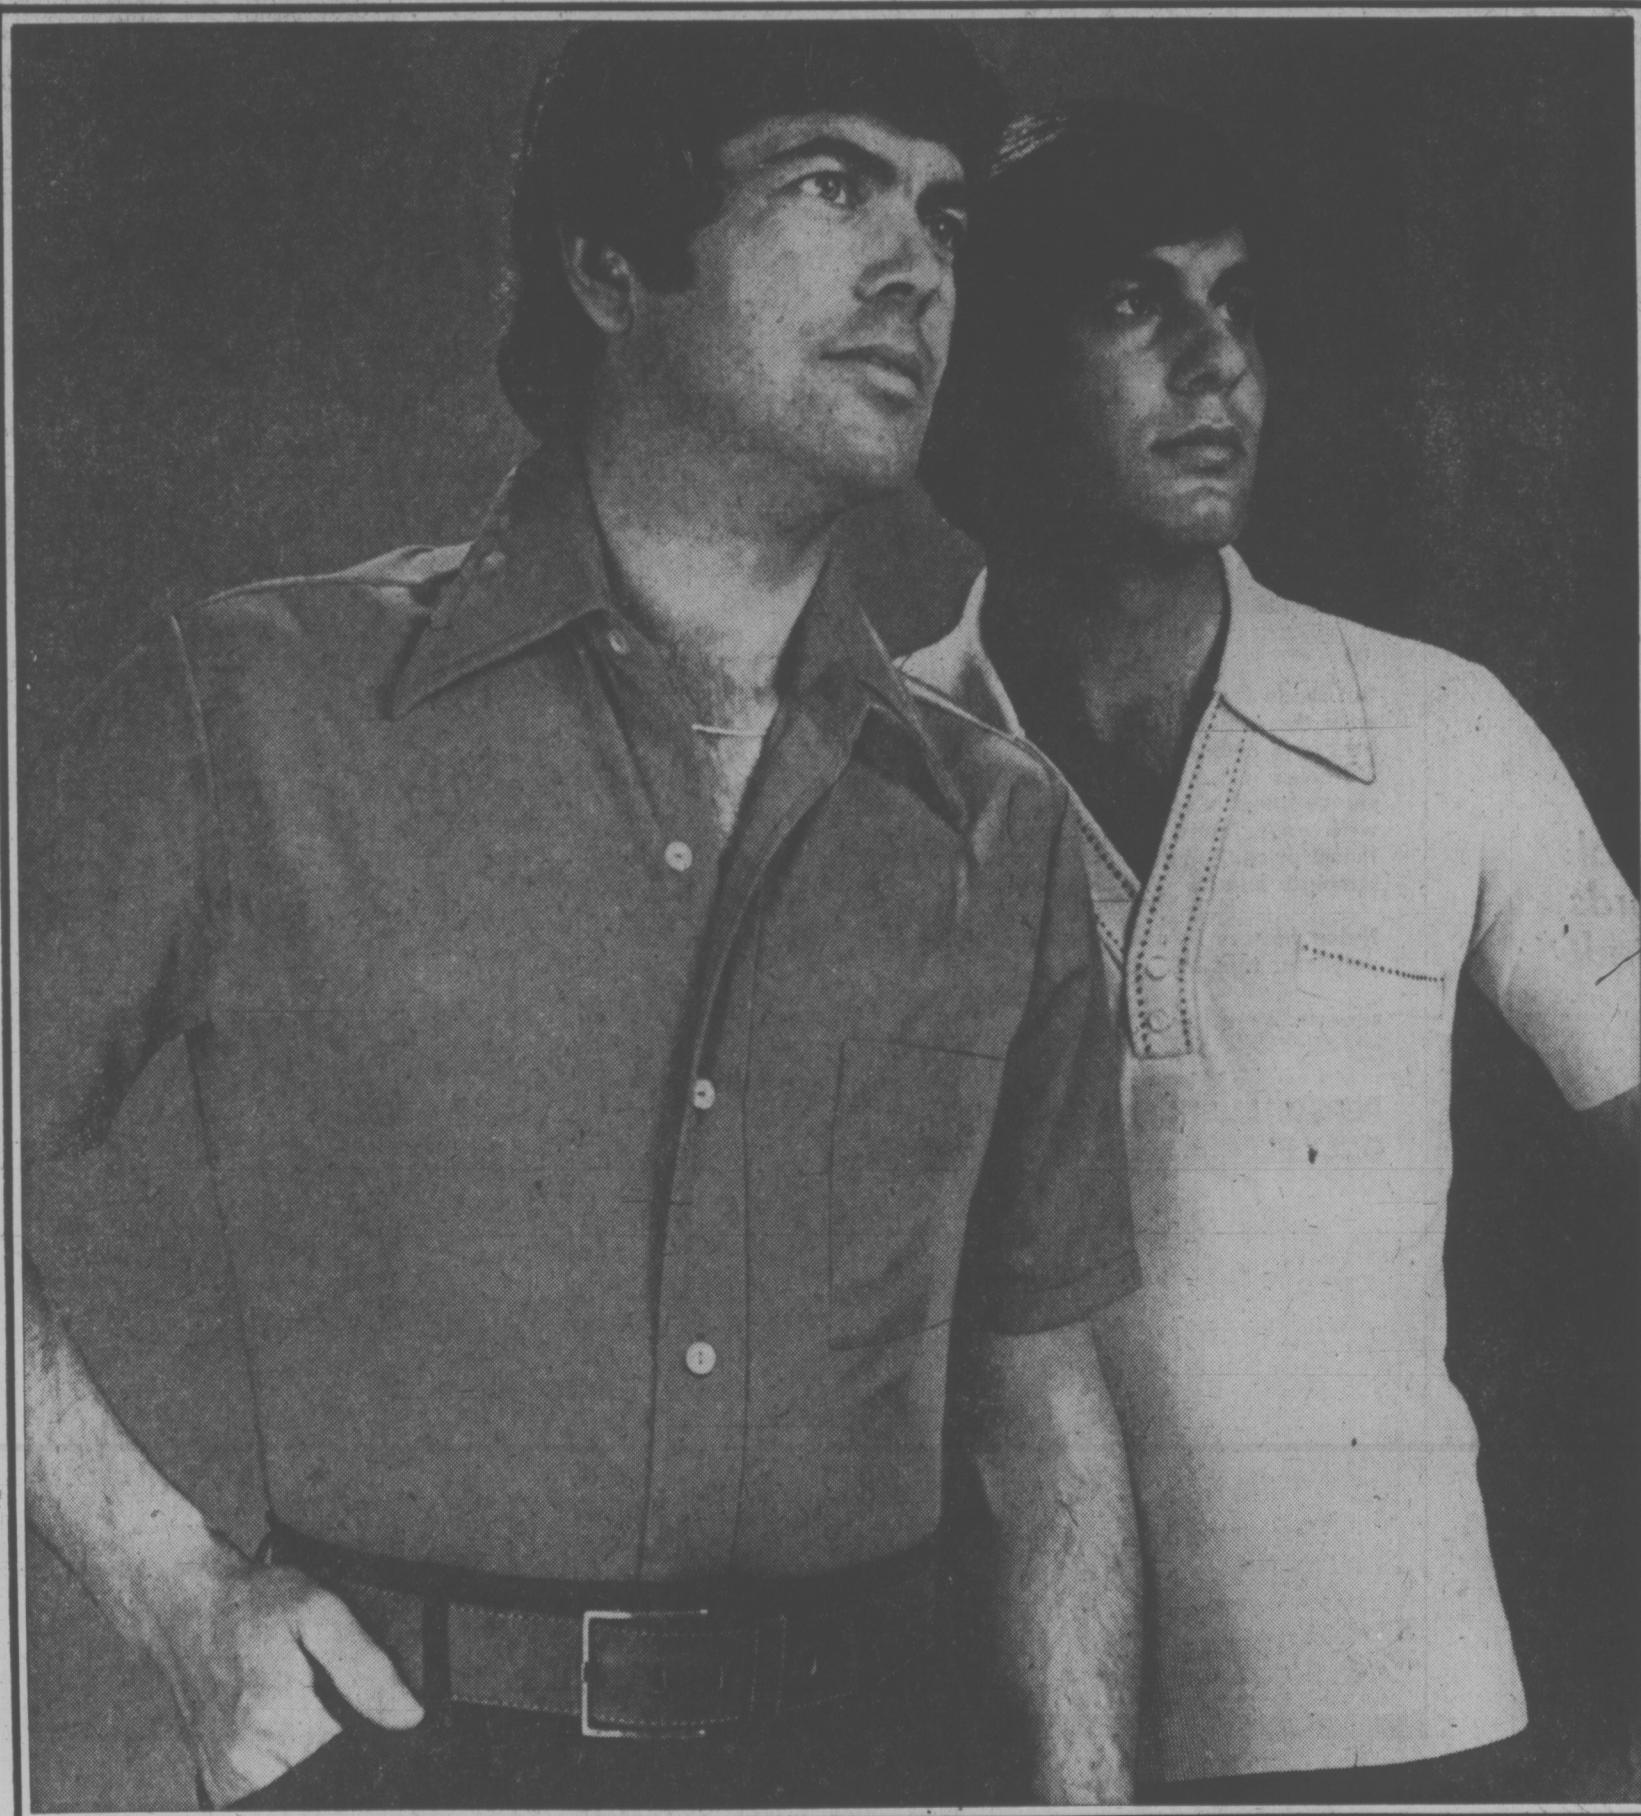

Leggatt's bill also would make it an offence not to report the loss of a registered firearm.

Allmand told reporters Tuesday that he once thought "registration might be the answer to gun control. But now I think there might be measures more effective and less bureaucratic."

SPEAKER RULES FOR TRUDEAU

OTTAWA (CP) — Commons Speaker James Jerome ruled Wednesday that Prime Minister Trudeau did not violate the parliamentary privileges of John Diefenbaker when he made allegations about Diefenbaker's expenditures while prime-minister.

minister could be called as a witness.

The Speaker said he resolved the "extremely difficult question" by concluding the disagreement, involving a dispute over facts, was debate, not a case of privilege.

In a May 22 speech, Trudeau asked Monday that the "slanderous and libelous allegations" by Trudeau be referred to the privileges committee where the prime minister could be called as a witness.

for this, acknowledging that Diefenbaker was not prime minister when this was done.

Lester Pearson, a Liberal, was prime minister when the stocking was done.

Trudeau did not withdraw two other statements. One concerned the Harrington Lake property, and Trudeau had said that "... I suppose he, Mr. Diefenbaker, made the largest land grab when he was in office that was ever made by any private citizen of Canada."

The 4,800 acres were purchased in 1951 under a Liberal government.

The prime minister also said Diefenbaker had a bomb shelter built at the prime minister's official residence at "substantial public expense." The former Conservative prime minister said the total cost of the shelter, an old fruit cellar, was $400.

The Magic Ingredients Were Missing In Sugar Daddy Riggs' Final Fling

By MAX LOW
Times Staff

Veteran tennis hustler Bobby Riggs flew to Calgary today after two days of almost non-stop talking, some fun tennis, and a match which should never have happened.

After going through his well-rehearsed male chauvinist patter for the benefit of newspapermen and radio and television announcers, the one-time Wimbledon champ took on Attorney-General Alex Macdonald and Oak Bay Mayor Brian Smith on the rain-slicked lawn in front of the Empress Hotel at noon Wednesday.

Bobby won that 6-3. But it didn't really matter. What the crowd of about 300 had come to see was fun — and that's what they got.

With Riggs gaily decked out in his bright yellow track suit, sporting his adopted nickname, Sugar Daddy, Smith wearing plus fours and red socks and Macdonald in a kilt and sporran, the game couldn't help but be a comic affair and the crowd got plenty of laughs.

However, while umpire Garde Gardom, independent MLA for Vancouver-Point Grey, struggled to keep score amidst the tomfoolery, Riggs demonstrated that he's still able to put his famous "stuff" on the ball with a variety of spins, lobs, drop-shots and slices.

Asked about the match later in the legislature, Macdonald said "I would not want at any time to humiliate an older man." The attorney-general is 56. Riggs is 57.

The same can't be said,

There was fun, too, Wednesday night at Memorial Arena — at least for part of the time.

Riggs clowned through a version of "strip-tennis" with attractive Ann Graham and Jean Shaw prior to Victoria Shamrocks' Western Lacrosse Association match with Coquitlam Adanacs and then tried his hand at scoring on goalkeepers Skip Chapman and George Grover of the Rocks and Dan Bartsch of the Adanacs.

He didn't do too well against them, either with a lacrosse stick or a tennis racket, being stopped on all 10 shots by the Victoria 'keepers and scoring three times against Bartsch.

But it was all good fun and the crowd, especially the kids, loved it.

The same can't be said,

though, for the rather funless fiasco that followed the lacrosse game — when Riggs turned back the challenge of Oak Bay Tennis Club's Tony Simnett, winning a $1,000 challenge match 9-5.

Most of the crowd of 3,553 fans (the Rocks' biggest by far this season) stayed behind, but there was a steady trickle to the exits when they realized they weren't going to get either good tennis or good fun.

Simnett, 39, although at first appearing to be at ease against his famous opponent and in front of a big crowd, was soon upset by Riggs' sharpangled shots and tricksy spin and his game fell to pieces. He double-faulted five times in the one game he desperately needed to win to stay in the match.

Those who went hoping to see live the kind of tennis

they watch at home on TV were disappointed. The match never reached a high enough standard to be exciting.

And yet, because of the deadly seriousness of the challenger, though far cooler, Riggs was pushed just hard enough to prevent him from clowning around. So the fun was missing, too.

Once, near the end, Bobby relaxed and when a lob by his opponent went just outside the baseline, he tiptoed past it like a cat and twirled his racket at the same time.

The crowd erupted in a roar. You'd think he'd just done something magic.

An Exchange of Letters On a Very Old Subject

Miss Margaret Bridger, of our town, has written me the following letter:

"Dear Sir: I read with abhorrence your statement that 'in China, no less than in Victoria or Moscow or new York or any other place you care to name, sex, on any scale of ten, is number one. Always has been always will be.'

"Such a pronouncement, coming from one who, it appears, is a self-appointed authority on such matters, may do more to influence readers in a detrimental way than all the insidious advertising you profess to be deplored. Have you no knowledge of any mental or spiritual planes which are able to place and keep sex in its proper and no doubt legitimate place in life?

"I was further revolted by your next paragraph which appears to equate sex with love, or the expression of love. The whole paragraph reflects an ignorance, or naivete, which is most incompatible with your worldly-wise pose. When was sex, used as broadly as you appear to be using the term, even conceived by even the most ingenious of our 'sophisticated' society, equated with 'the motivation of love between men and women, whether it is to be expressed in a physical or cerebral way.'

"I suggest you consult a dictionary before you blandly toss off your erroneous dictums — there may be some misguided souls among us who actually believe what you write.

Disgusted,
(Miss) Margaret Bridger."

I have written Miss Bridger the following letter:

"Dear Miss Bridger:

"Your interesting letter reached me at a time when I've been in the process of re-discovering Ernest Hemingway, reading, after a good many years, his novels and short stories. If it is not already on your shelves may I recommend A Farewell to Arms, one of the great love stories of our time. More than anything I might write this fine, enduring novel puts into perspective the relationship between love and sex which, obviously, I failed to do in my column.

"There are, of course, any number of authors, philosophers, pundits, scientists and thinkers of one kind or another, both men and women, who might be quoted to support the notion that sex is the strongest force in our lives. Havelock Ellis, for example, observed that 'The omnipresence process of sex, as it is woven into the whole texture of our man's or woman's body, is the pattern of all the process of our life.' It is really as simple as that, Miss Bridger.

"But it is all there much truer and more simply in Hemingway's story, a story of a man and a woman who love each other in a time of war and whose sex life is a perfectly natural expression of that love. I can think of no other work of fiction — and certainly not in the novels of today — in which it is expressed so beautifully.

"If, as I gather from your letter, you are simply concerned with the commercial exploitation of sex or the immature, leering approach to it that's so common today, then it's obvious that we agree. But that is not what I said in the column you abhor. I was saying only that sex is our strongest motivation, that without it there would not be the thoughts and aspirations and sacrifices that have existed since the world began. When you speak of 'mental or spiritual planes' you simply cannot divorce them from the process that, as Ellis said, is woven into the texture of every man and woman.

"Even to suggest that it is an evil of our lives rather than a force for good is a denial of the power of love since there is no way to distinguish between the two when a man and woman are involved. We have made it a cheap and exploitative thing by this attitude of denial. Together, they make the most natural, the finest and the most enabling of all life's discoveries.

"I hope that you will read or re-read A Farewell to Arms and enjoy, as I did, if only vicariously, the story of a relationship that rises above war, revolutions and the petty stupidities of the human animal.

"Yours humbly,
J. Scott."

A-G: All Courts In One Building

The provincial government agrees today to pick up the tab for cleaning up three-quarters of a mile of Mill Bay shoreline in the Saanich Inlet which has been fouled with thick oil sludge since Friday.

The government action was taken after Cowichan Regional Board chairman Ralph Kelr complained the district had neither money, staff nor know-how with which to handle the cleanup operation.

Barney Lane, Provincial Emergency Program co-ordinator for the cleanup admitted the government was setting a precedent by agreeing to pay the $6,000 needed to clean the beach, which is within a provincial recreation reserve.

The ministry of transport is responsible for cleanup of oil spills at sea and in the water but, once onshore, minor spills become the responsibility of the municipality or district in which they occur. In the case of a major spill, however, all government resources would be on call.

This particular incident could lead to some meaningful dialogue between the provincial and federal governments, Lane observed, explaining that PEP is only a co-ordinating body.

Lane said the spill was probably caused by a ship pumping her bilges in the area and predicted this kind of spill will become more common around Vancouver Island.

"Vancouver has tightened up restrictions so much that ships are waiting until they get over here (to pump bilges)," he said.

NO CHARGES AGAINST SCs

No charges will be laid against the Social Credit party for applying for summer student employment funds earmarked for small businesses by the provincial government.

The attorney general's department has decided Socreds were acting foolishly rather than criminally in trying to get government funds for political purposes.

"I'm not approving the propriety of what happened," said Attorney General Alex Macdonald today, "... but as to whether there was an infraction of the law, it's not there."

"It was so transparent it wouldn't fool a child of three," Macdonald said.

To lay a charge of fraud against the party, its application would have had to actually fooled the government and Macdonald said no one would have been fooled by the application.

The matter was referred to Macdonald's department after it was discovered that Social Credit constituency offices had applied for student employment funds to hire people to work for them during the summer.

Socred party president Grace McCarthy explained later the applications were made to find out whether the government supported the principle of public funding for political parties.

Since the government rejected the applications, said McCarthy, it shows they do not support the principle and therefore should not include it in the elections act.

50% Increase in Fares Claimed on Sooke Run

Fares on the provincial government's new Sooke-Victoria bus service which began Monday are more than 50 per cent higher than when the service was operated by South West Coach Lines Ltd., a Sooke resident claimed Wednesday.

Kenneth McQueen, of Phillips Avenue, Sooke, said the most annoying aspect to the increase is that prior to the service starting politicians' announcements and newspaper advertisements announced that former fares would be continued.

Yet transit officials are now trying to make out that such assurances were never meant to refer to season tickets, he said.

"To my mind it amounts to a very slick con job," added McQueen.

He said the $34 monthly pass previously available to Sooke commuters under the private South West operation has been scrapped, and travellers now have to pay $2.60 for the daily round trip.

Based on 20 working days in June, that number of trips will cost $32 — as increase of $18.

McQueen said Sooke commuters who met earlier this week to discuss the problem were "hostile" to the government on the fares policy, and even discussed some sort of boycott action involving a car pool to back up their protests.

Resulting from that meeting, Ronald Dumont, Sooke's director on the Capital Regional board, will meet today with Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer to request that the monthly pass system be restored.

McQueen said all he has been able to find out so far is that the government service may introduce a fare concession giving 10 trips for the price of eight.

A spokesman in Lorimer's office said an announcement on the matter will be made shortly. He said the feeling of transit officials was that a pass allowing a reduction of more than 50 per cent on the standard fare was unrealistically generous.

Savage Tuned Out

A delegation from the Victoria Symphony warned city aldermen today that unless the organization receives strong financial support from municipalities it will have to drastically cut back its program of bringing music to Victoria-area schools.

But one member of Victoria's finance committee, Ald. Clyde Savage, said he fails to see why the cost of such a program — an estimated $17,600 for 1975 — should be borne by municipalities and not by school boards.

In any case, he added, recalling the absence of any similar frills in his own school days, "it's really not what you go to school for."

"I can appreciate you are bringing this cultural thing to young people; but at a cost of $17,600 . . ."

Savage said he would rather see the money used in more useful ways: to give concerts for the enjoyment of senior citizens, for example.

Symphony officials said after their presentation that local school boards had not actually declined financial support, but an adjustment in fiscal policies had apparently redirected money for such purposes to be used at the discretion of individual principals. Vice-president Nick Pearson said principals want to see continued the program of full orchestral concerts and performances by string ensembles, but "we simply can't do it on the haphazard basis of $25 or $30 per visit."

Of the Symphony's total $427,000 budget this year it has asked for $40,000 from municipalities. In early May the Intermunicipal Committee recommended a $25,000 grant, representing a 12 per cent increase on the $21,732 approved last year.

Victoria's share of the 1974 grant, under the intermunicipal cost-sharing formula, was $8,646. That would rise to about $16,000 if the full $40,000 requested this year were approved.

Society treasurer Peter Dorazio noted the budget shortfall now stands at $15,000, notwithstanding the fact that the budget was already severely trimmed to the point where it was "almost an accountant's budget."

But just because the school board attitude was "narrow minded" it didn't mean civic leaders should adopt a similar stance he added.

The committee finally recommended against the request.

She Lost to the 'Machine'

Shirley Wilde said today she fought a "political machine" within the Esquimalt Social Credit constituency association during her term as association president.

Wilde, who resigned as president after she lost a confidence vote at a May 12 membership meeting, switched to the Conservative Party on Tuesday.

She said trouble within the association started when she defeated Jack Fry for the presidency last October.

A four-man group within the association formed that worked against her and started taking actions on behalf of the association without her approval, Wilde said.

She said the association executive agreed unanimously at a February meeting that money raised by a Feb. 26 wine and cheese party should not be used for a storefront constituency office until an election was called.

Yet after the party the $1,600 it raised was placed in a separate association bank account by an executive member, without her authorization, said Wilde.

Wilde said she read her president's report, outlining the areas where she felt her authority was being undermined, then turned the chair over to vice-president Byron Barker.

Appointment Not Tokenism

"This is not a token appointment," Hon. Gordon Dowling, Speaker of the Legislature, assured me. "It was made entirely on merit and certainly had nothing to do with it being International Women's Year, as some seem to think."

He was talking of the recent announcement that Evelyn Miller had been named clerk assistant and clerk of committees, to the Legislative Assembly.

"We wanted someone with the skill, the knowledge and the background to fill those positions," Dowling continued.

Mrs. Miller was secretary to the clerk of the House for some years and had all these attributes. She is also well-known and well liked by

forbes

every member of the Legislature and indeed, by everyone here.

To substantiate that statement, the speaker told me of the unanimous approval of all parties when motion for the appointment was presented on the floor of the House.

He showed me the Hansard of that day, in which it is recorded that Ed Smith, Social Credit MLA for North Peace River, in speaking for the official opposition, said in part "she (Mrs. Miller) has been a tremendous individual and a very gracious lady to deal with."

Liberal Leader David Anderson seconded Smith's words, welcomed the appointment for himself and Gordon Gibson and wished Mrs. Miller "well in this new appointment."

Conservative Scott Wallace, spoke of Mrs. Miller's "decorum and patience when we sometimes descend in a cloud as MLA's all eager to scrutinize some document."

Every document tabled in the Legislature and all papers and records are kept in the clerk's office.

Speaking as an independent, Allan Williams said he didn't think "there is anybody who has been in this House any length of time who doesn't appreciate the very great assistance that Mrs.

Miller has been to all members at all times."

Phyllis Young, minister of consumers affairs, in expressing delight at seeing Mrs. Miller seated at the clerk's desk in the House, said she was speaking for all women members of the assembly.

In lighter vein, but nevertheless, sincere, Premier Barrett offered his congratulations, especially "for her courage in taking on this job." To the laughter of his colleagues he also offered his "continuing condolences."

Mrs. Miller is the first woman in British Columbia to hold the positions to which she has been appointed.

There has been a woman clerk of the Legislature in Saskatchewan (now retired) and, at present, there is a woman clerk assistant there. In the Yukon there is a woman clerk and woman clerk assistant.

As for the skill and knowledge ascribed to her by DeBeck.

He was a great parliamentarian, and if anyone showed interest, no matter how simple the question might appear to him, he always had time and was willing to explain.

DeBeck was Clerk of the House for 25 years, retiring in 1974 on his 90th birthday. He then held the title of clerk consultant until his death last January.

As clerk assistant to the legislature, Mrs. Miller sits with the clerk and deputy clerk, Ian Horne, Q.C., and George MacMinn, at a desk in front of the speaker's chair.

There she will record "not what is said but what is done" in the House.

She will prepare the Votes and Proceedings every day of every session, also the orders of the day, "which are so necessary, especially for members of the legislature."

It will also be her duty to index Journals of all Votes and Proceedings, kept in filing binders for distribution to members and to libraries.

All duties as clerk of committees have not been outlined, as this is a brand new office.

She does know however, that she will co-ordinate the functions of the many legislative committees, keep track of meetings and findings and help committee members where needed, not only during the sittings of the legislature but also between sessions.

Evelyn Miller was born in Victoria, daughter of Ernest and Margaret Foulds, the latter well-known in earlier years as head of the B.C. Electric home service department.

She is married to Chris Miller, a staff member of Victoria Press and a former violinist with Victoria Symphony Orchestra.

When the Law Society of British Columbia was located in the old Court House in Bastion Square, she acted as secretary there for 10 years, before moving to the Legislative Buildings in a part-time capacity that eventually saw her become secretary to Ned DeBeck.

"At first it was only for a period of about 10 weeks," she says, "while the legislature sat for one session a year."

"Gradually, as the work load increased, and two sessions a year were inaugurated, it became a full-time position."

Mrs. Miller has also done her share of volunteer service in Victoria.

First with the Solarium Junior League when the children's hospital was at Mill Bay, then with the Cerebral Palsy Clinic in its formative days on the Royal Jubilee Hospital ground, where she was first president of the Women's Auxiliary and helped to form the volunteers' corps.

Now she is a member and past president of the Women's Committee of the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria.

Barbecued Turkey For Outdoor Feast

The outdoor covered barbecue makes summer entertaining easy and fun, especially when the menu features a barbecue'd turkey. Using the barbecue keeps the kitchen cool and lets the cook stay outdoors where the action is. Since an unstufl'd turkey on the barbecue will cook in less time than in the oven, test a 2½-pound bird after about 2½ hours. A roast meat thermometer should register 180-185 degrees and the thickest portion of the thigh should feel soft.

Complete the outdoor feast with corn cooked in foil on the grill and a casserole of potatoes which needs only to be heated through. Hot crusty bread and fresh fruit will round out the meal nicely.

Leftovers are no problem since turkey is a summertime favourite for shaping up and slimming down. Turkey rates high in protein (flavour too!) and is low in fat. Use leftover turkey in a tasty, cool Cucumber Salad — a refreshing luncheon dish.

BARBECUED POTATO CASEROLE

4-5 Servings

19-oz. can (about 2 cups) sliced potatoes, drained
1 cup shredded cheddar cheese
½ cup chopped green onions
½ teaspoon dry mustard
½ cup milk

Combine potatoes, cheese and onion in a 4-cup, foil pan. Blend mustard and milk. Pour over potatoes. Place on rack in barbecue, beside the turkey, for the last 25-30 minutes roasting time. For a larger crowd, make 2 pans.

FOIL ROASTED CORN
Remove husks and silk from corn. Place each cob on a sheet of heavy duty foil.

Toss together turkey, cucumber, olives, green pepper and celery in large bowl. In a small bowl, blend onion, salt, lemon juice and mayonnaise. Combine with turkey mixture. Add eggs. Chill. Crumble blue cheese over top to serve, if desired.

TO ALL MEN AND WOMEN WHO HAVE JUST ABOUT GIVEN UP ON THEIR HAIR: DON'T!

A Finnish medical team has developed a preparation which restores new life to dormant hair roots. The new preparation has been successfully tested by this research group on both animals and humans. Among the test subjects was a professor of medicine whose full growth of hair was restored by this treatment. The preparation shows results within 5 to 10 weeks. However, the treatment must be continued until the hair is fully regrown.

French Restaurateur 'New Wave' Chef

By CRAIG CLAIRBORNE

To a provincial New Yorker, the discovery of an exciting French restaurant in Chicago might seem a distinct and provocative cultural happening. To discover a restaurant of outstanding merit in a small and otherwise undistinguished village approximately 40 miles north of the Windy City's Loop comes as cosmic revelation. But Le Francois restaurant at Wheeling, Ill., would rank on almost any count with the finest French restaurants in America. In some areas it all but outdistances any but those on the top rung of the gastronomic ladder.

Le Francois is the culinary offspring of Jean Banchet, a 34-year-old Burgundian whom we had known only by reputation through the plaudits of several French chefs in Manhattan. We had been told that he is a young man of exceptional talent, imagination and industry, and over a bottle of Taittinger champagne in his Chicago apartment, he informed us that he had not been born to the meter, although he was born in the Burgundy town of Roanne, best celebrated for the home of the lavishly praised and much discussed Troisgros restaurant.

"My mother was a good cook, yes, but in my very earliest years I never thought of becoming a chef. I met the Troisgros brothers, Pierre and Jean, and they were kind to me. At some point I started reading magazines for chefs and everything started to crystallize when I was 14 or 15."

Chef Banchet had invited us to join him at his restaurant to inspect the place and watch him cook. After an hour's drive we arrived in a fairly nondescript setting, a neat, white frame house on a small road with a good deal of traffic passing by.

"This house," he told us, "is 50 years old. It had been a roadside inn for 25 years with a succession of owners."

Le Francois has been an immediate success since it opened its doors about two years ago.

"In the beginning we had a bad time trying to honor reservations, because people were starting to book weeks in advance, and a lot of them would fail to show after telephoning two or three weeks earlier. Now we won't take a reservation more than a week in advance."

One reason for Banchet's outstanding and deserved success is his intense dedication to his work. Although he and his wife, Doris, have an apartment in Chicago, they live in a small home near the restaurant. He is generally at his stove by 8:30 a.m., making mousse, soups, desserts and other basics before the hordes arrive at 6 p.m.

He is enormously innovative, and the clientele dines on some of the most memorable inventions of the "new wave" of French chefs that includes the Troisgros Brothers and Paul Bocuse, all of whom are friends.

One of his most popular dishes is a Troisgros creation, now celebrated wherever serious eaters gather, the salmon with sorrel sauce. Here is the recipe:

SALMON WITH SORREL SAUCE

(Salmon A L'Osaille)

1 three-to-three-and-one-half-pound boned, skinned salmon or striped bass fillets

½ cup chopped shallots

4 cups rich fish stock (see recipe)

½ cup dry vermouth

1 cup dry white wine

¼ cup heavy cream

Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste

3 tablespoons fish glaze (see note), optional

¼ pound fresh sorrel or spinach, stems removed

4 egg yolks

2 tablespoons butter

Juice of half a lemon

Flour for dredging

½ cup clarified butter (see recipe)

1. Cut the fish on the bias like smoked salmon into quarter-inch thick slices. Flatten gently with a flat mallet. Refrigerate.

2. In a deep skillet, combine the shallots, fish stock, vermouth and white wine. Cook over high heat about 40 to 45 minutes until the liquid is reduced to about half a cup.

3. Add two cups cream, salt and pepper to taste. Bring to the boil and stir in the fish glaze, if used. Cook over high heat about two minutes. Cut the sorrel or spinach into very fine shreds (chiffonade). Add the sorrel or spinach and bring to the boil. Beat the yolks with the remaining cream. Remove the sauce from the heat and stir in the yolk and cream mixture. Add the 2 tablespoons butter and swirl it in. Season with lemon juice.

4. Keep the juice hot but do not boil or it will curdle.

5. Dredge the fish slices lightly in flour seasoned with salt and pepper.

6. Heat the clarified butter in one or two large skillets. When it is very hot but not smoking, add the fish slices. Cook about one minute on one side until golden brown. Turn and cook about one minute on the other. Serve the fish with the sauce spooned over.

Yield: Four to six servings.

Note: Fish glaze is a long-simmered reduction of fish stock. The stock is cooked many hours until it becomes a thick gelatinous, lightly brown mass, like thick, smooth caramel.

CLARIFIED BUTTER

To clarify butter, place the butter in a heatproof glass measuring cup and let it melt slowly in a 200-degree F. oven. Do not stir the butter. Pour off the clear, golden liquid on top, leaving the white milky substance at the bottom. The clear liquid is clarified butter.

FISH STOCK

2½ pounds fish bones (may include head of fish with gills removed)

2 cups coarsely chopped clery

2 cups thinly sliced onions

1 whole clove garlic, peeled, sliced in half

2 cups, chopped, well-washed green parts of leeks

3 sprigs fresh thyme

1 bay leaf

2 quarts water

½ bottle dry white wine

¼ teaspoon peppercorns

Salt to taste.

Combine all the ingredients in a large pot. Bring to a boil and simmer about 20 minutes. Strain.

Yield: Eight to 10 cups.

Cake Saturated with Orange For Snacks from Freezer

By MARY MORE

How would you like to make a cake that is saturated with orange flavor? This is made in a tube pan and has a firm texture and freezes well. You can take it from its freezer wrapping, cut off a few slices and return it for future snacking. Its rich orange flavor is its great feature.

GOLDEN ORANGE CAKE
(9 inch or 10 inch tube pan)

with removable centre)
2½ cup sifted all-purpose flour
1 tsp. baking powder
1 tsp. baking soda
½ tsp. salt
¾ c. margarine
1 c. sugar
3 large eggs or 4 medium eggs — yolks and whites separated
1 c. dairy sour cream grated rind 1 large orange ¼ c. orange juice

½ c. water
½ c. coarsely chopped walnuts or pecans
Glaze:
½ c. undiluted fresh frozen orange juice concentrate
½ c. sugar
Sift together the flour, baking powder, baking soda and salt. Cream together the margarine and sugar then beat in egg yolks. Fold in sifted dry ingredients alternately with sour cream, orange juice and water. Add walnuts and orange rind. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites.

Line bottom and part way up sides of tube pan. To do this stand removable tube on a sheet of wax paper and cut out a round of wax paper 1" larger all round than base of tube. Slit the edges in eight places all round. Make hole at centre and slip over tube. Insert in pan and overlap slits to make them neat. Butter wax paper. Pour in batter. Smooth top and bake at 350 deg. Fahr. 45 minutes. — While cake is still hot poke holes all over top with ice pick. Mix together the fresh frozen orange juice concentrate, water and ½ cup sugar, then add to cake. Let stand until cold. If desired top may be decorated with sliced almonds.

You cannot turn this cake upside down obviously. So lift it out on removable section, loosen bottom with long pointed knife and with two lifters, lift it up and out onto fancy cake plate. Peel off as much wax paper as you can. This cake keeps well and freezes well.

NOTE: Write to Mary Moore, 32 Churchill Ave., Hamilton, Ont., enclosing stamped self-addressed envelope and 10 cents for each specified recipe.

EDMONTON (CP) — Canadian readers expect too much of their country's literature, says author-playwright Robertson Davies.

Readers are always expecting "the great Canadian novel or the great Canadian poem" whenever they approach a new book, he told a symposium of the Royal Society of Canada at the University of Alberta.

Reconciliation At Mom's Funeral

DEAR ABBY: I just read about the mother who was broken-hearted because her son and daughter (both married with families) hadn't spoken to each other for years and were the reason she could not have complete family get-togethers.

If my own experience means anything, tell that mother not to worry. Eventually they'll make up. And although she won't live to see it, she will be the cause of it, because it will take place at her funeral.

Since everyone will be crying anyway, the two who finally decided to make up won't be conspicuous — even though they'll be crying twice as hard as everyone else. And with good reason.

Think about it, kids. Sign me... Cried Me a River.

DEAR CRIED: I wonder how many others have to bury a relative before they bury the hatchet? It's something to think about, all right. Thanks for a timely reminder. (Nu, Charley?)

DEAR READER: I personally feel that if you do not want children, it's your right. Keep shopping around for a doctor. If you can't find one, inquire at your nearest Planned Parenthood office for information. Their motto is: "Every child should be a wanted child." And I couldn't agree more.

DEAR ABBY: It's been 50 years since I've even thought of my childhood sweetheart. Then I read in the obituary column that her father had died, and she was still a "Miss."

I have been widowed for 18 months, so I sent this childhood sweetheart a mass card. She promptly wrote to thank me for it. Then I sent a comic card that read, "Are you free Saturday night? I have $2.95 to spend." (I wrote on the bottom, "On the serious side, I'd like to take you out for dinner if you aren't too upset about the loss of your father.")

No reply. Should I write to her again? Perhaps telephone her? Do you think that re-

Thanks for your comments.

—CONNECTICUT YANKEE

DEAR YANK: Your comic card may not have been so comical since the lady was still in mourning. Wait a while, then telephone her. If you get a chilly reception, you'll know you blew it.

DEAR ABBY: With reference to walk-in customers versus telephone customers, this is how I handle it: When I phone a store, I always open my inquiry with: "If you are not with a customer now, will you please help me?"

The clerk says, "Yes, I can help you" or "I'm busy now, may I take your number and call you back, or will you hold?" They act like they're committing some kind of crime.

Abby, why shouldn't I be able to have that kind of operation if that is what I want? And where can I find a doctor who will do it?" — IDAHO READER

Then, when I am in a store and in a hurry, if the phone rings while I'm being waited on and the salesperson makes a move to answer it, I say, "Please ask the person on the phone to wait. I was here first, and I am in a hurry."

They always look a little shocked, but I don't care because I know I'm right. And if they just stop and think, they'll agree.

I have also been a salesperson, so I've been on both sides of the counter. — "SELDOM STANDING"

DEAR ABBY: Your system makes sense for telephone shoppers, walk-in customers and clerks. Thanks for the sensible suggestion.

Chicken with Vinegar Lyonnaise Preparation

PÔULET AU VINAIGRE

(Serves 4)

3 tablespoons clarified butter or 2 tablespoons butter and 1 tablespoon cooking oil

1 chicken (2½ to 3 pounds), cut into small serving pieces

Salt and pepper

1 large or 2 small tomatoes (about ¼ pound), peeled and seeds removed

2 tablespoons chopped parsley

2 tablespoons butter

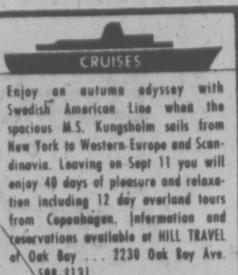

Heat 3 tablespoons clarified butter (or butter and oil) with garlic cloves in a heavy-bottomed pan. After butter has sizzled and sound dies, add chicken pieces. They should fit the bottom in one snug layer.

Sauté over medium-high heat until pieces are lightly browned, 5 to 7 minutes. Salt and pepper liberally.

Meanwhile, chop tomato to a dice. When chicken is brown, add vinegar. Let liquid come to a brisk boil, then add

People Unrealistic Pondering Death

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The doctor, the nurse and the priest as other people when forced to contemplate death.

A survey published in the Journal of Medical Education asked 78 Canadian medical, nursing and divinity students to fill out their own death certificates. Only 30 would do it, and the responses projected the typical human 'hope' that death will come late, quickly and not in summertime.

The results . . . show that a group of students in health professional training, even after considering the facts of death in the abstract, still project very unrealistic perceptions of their own death," the study said.

"They expect to die older and far quicker than is ever likely to be the case, very few anticipate cancer or suicide, though these are likely causes of death in such a group."

Dr. Michael Simpson surveyed Canadian medical, nursing and divinity students participating in a course on death and dying at McMaster University, and who might have been expected to have practical and dispassionate opinion.

Their mock death certificates were rated against Canadian national mortality statistics.

"Some felt unable to fill them out at all," Simpson wrote. "Some filled them in but refused to let anyone see them. Two returned certificates to the author but asked that they be burned after he had extracted the information from them."

Of the 30 forms completed, 21 came from female students.

Heart disease was the most common expected cause of death, followed by accidents.

Only two students picked stroke, two anticipated cancer deaths and one predicted suicide at age 72.

The students' ages ranged from 18 to 50 years, and they predicted an average age at death of 70.3 years. Two said they would live to be 100.

None expected to die in June; July or August. Nearly three fourths believed they would die in winter.

DUBLIN (UPI) — The Irish Roman Catholic hierarchy have firmly upheld the pastoral view on birth control and condemned the "contraceptive mentality" of modern society.

In the fourth and final section of a pastoral letter, the Irish bishops said that Catholic priests and confessors must state clearly when asked that contraception is wrong.

They said that Pope Paul VI in his 1968 encyclical, Hu-mane Vitae, restated "the church's traditional teaching about birth regulation.

"He reaffirmed in absolute terms the immorality of birth control and of contraception," the bishops said.

The document said modern society's "contraceptive mentality stems from the invasion of the Christian attitude to life and marriage by typically materialist standards.

This contraceptive mentality is characterized by a lack of generosity and of readiness to assume responsibility, and is fundamentally opposed to the Christian concept of responsible parenthood. It tends to regard comfort, wealth, worldly success and pleasure as the aims of life."

The pastoral letter will be read from pulpits and distributed to churchgoers. Previous sections condemned political violence in Northern Ireland and the practice of euthanasia.

The bishops said research into natural methods of birth control were continuing and their feasibility gradually increasing.

Natural methods of birth regulation are essentially different from artificial methods because they are based on God's own design for the cycle of reproduction," they said.

The sale of contraceptive devices is illegal in the Irish Republic, but a 1973 Supreme Court ruling found that the law prohibiting their importation was unconstitutional.

Despite the ruling, a bill to permit the limited importation and sale of contraceptives through organized outlets was defeated in Parliament.

Two researchers said they found high levels of a female hormone in the blood and livers of men who drink excessively. They said it may explain why such men acquire feminine physical characteristics and, in some cases, become impotent and sterile.

The students' ages ranged from 18 to 50 years, and they predicted an average age at death of 70.3 years. Two said they would live to be 100.

None expected to die in June; July or August. Nearly three fourths believed they would die in winter.

RC Hierarchy Upholds View

On Birth Control

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — Two researchers said they found high levels of a female hormone in the blood and livers of men who drink excessively. They said it may explain why such men acquire feminine physical characteristics and, in some cases, become impotent and sterile.

Dr. Van Thiel, delivering a paper to about 4,000 doctors attending a conference on digestive disorders, described the results of a two-year study at the Boston City Hospital. He and Lester are from the University of Pittsburgh.

He said that symptoms such as physical feminine characteristics and impotence have been recognized in chronic alcoholics for some time and that sex clinics will not handle persons with sex problems if they know the problem is alcohol.

Dr. Van Thiel said they tested the livers and blood of 50 chronic alcoholic men in Boston between the ages of 29 and 65. They found a level of estrone at least three times as high as in a test group of normal males.

Seniors' Home Solar-Heated

OTTAWA (CP) — The Ontario government has announced it is going to build a senior citizens home that will be heated in part by solar energy. It will be the largest solar-heated building in Canada.

Delegates at a solar energy conference also were told that the Quebec government is harnessing an alternative energy form — the wind — and construction of a $200,000 windmill to provide supplemental power for the Magdalen Islands in the Gulf of St. Lawrence will begin within a month.

R. M. R. Higgin, a senior technical adviser of Ontario's energy ministry, said no site had been chosen for construction of the building that will contain 20 to 30 units.

The revolutionary two-storey solar home will cost

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

Today's deal features an "off-the-beaten-path" defensive falsecard which, if it had not been made, would have resulted in our South declarer fulfilling a vulnerable game contract. The deal arose in a recent top-level rubber-bridge game played in Washington, D.C.

Opening lead: Queen of ♦.

After the opening heart lead had been made and the dummy came into view, declarer perceived that he had just seven top tricks. It was obvious that the spade suit afforded the best chance of creating the two additional tricks that declarer needed.

Upon winning West's heart lead, declarer led a low spade, putting up dummy's three hearts.

Had East won the initial lead (at trick two) in normal fashion with his jack, declarer would have been "forced" to fulfill his contract. After he had captured East's heart return (with his remaining stopper in this suit) he would have entered dummy via the diamond ace. Next would come the queen of spades, with the hope that East possessed the king. Whether East covered with the king or didn't, declarer would now make three spade tricks and his contract.

FRAUD RUNG UP

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Bernard Cornfeld, 47, former chairman of a mutual funds corporation, Wednesday was indicted by a federal grand jury on charges of using a device to defraud the telephone company.

The three-count indictment charged Cornfeld used a "blue box" to place overseas phone calls.

The U.S. Attorney's office said a "blue box" is an electronic device which is designed to generate tones and signals similar to those used by the telephone company. Their manufacture and possession are illegal in California.

Two such devices were taken from Cornfeld's Beverly Hills home earlier this year by FBI agents acting on a search warrant.

Cornfeld is the former board chairman of Overseas Investors Services, a mutual funds corporation.

MIAMI (AP) — About 150 airplanes laden with marijuana cross the borders of the United States every day, and U.S. government officials say a growing number of them are not completing their illicit missions.

"The pilots come a dime-a-dozen," Jacques Kiere, director of a federal drug enforcement intelligence agency, said Wednesday. "Whether they can fly is immaterial."

Kiere said his agency, the El Paso Texas Intelligence Centre, knows of 49 crashes since Jan. 1 involving planes smuggling marijuana into the U.S. While many of those crashes occurred in other countries, all involved planes connected with marijuana traffic in the U.S., he said.

Officials attribute the number of failed missions to the greed and inexperience of smugglers and enforcement efforts of local and federal officers.

"The smugglers tend to overload their planes, and the pilots often land on undeveloped strips and pieces of road,"

David Costa, deputy regional director of the Federal Drug Enforcement Agency in Miami, said a major operation by Jamaican and American agents last year dealt a severe blow to the Jamaican marijuana industry.

The mission, dubbed Operation Buccaneer, ended with the confiscation of 730,000 pounds of marijuana and 8,083 pounds of marijuana seeds, Costa said.

As a result, smugglers began concentrating on the Colombian and Mexican brands.

To carry the marijuana that far, smugglers needed long-range, large-payload, dependable machines. Enter the B-25, Lockheed, Lodestar and Constellation—all Second World War airplanes.

The bombers can carry pot in the bomb bays, which are doubly effective because if the pilot suspects he is being followed he can dump the stuff before we catch up or just pass low over trucks or whatever and make the delivery without even landing," Kiere said.

For people seeking to make a lot of money quick, marijuana smuggling offers large profits at comparatively little risk.

Hang Murderers, Ont. Police Demand

Postal Official Wielded Knife, Union Charges

OTTAWA (CP) — The National president of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers said Wednesday post office managers have engaged in a campaign of intimidation and coercion against members of his union.

Joe Davidson presented a news conference with a 10-point list of allegations which he said was proof of the intimidation campaign.

He also said he was misinterpreted in a May 29 statement to reporters in which he said: "If the public won't see the justice of our cause, then to hell with the public."

Davidson said Postmaster-General Bryce Mackasey has been spreading lies about the union, saying some of the postal clerks and mail sorters in Montreal are "goons" who have been employing violence.

He said Mackasey has not been able to show proof that violence against supervisors was caused by postal workers.

The union intended to lay charges against a Montreal supervisor alleged to have threatened employees with a knife during recent disputes over the use of casual non-union labor, he said.

Davidson said he hoped Mackasey would meet him in a public debate on television both the union and the post office could state their positions.

"We think the public should know who is really causing the problems in the post office and I challenge the postmaster-generals to a public debate on any television station so the people of Canada can judge for themselves," he said.

Meanwhile, in Montreal, hundreds of demonstrating postal workers chanted "Mackasey to the stake" Wednesday as Mackasey announced at Montreal's central post office: "The situation can be described as normal."

Monopoly Rejected

FREDERICTON (CP) — Finding no proof of detriment to the public, the appeals division of the New Brunswick Supreme Court overturned Wednesday the newspaper monopoly convictions of four Irving-controlled companies.

In a 41-page judgment, the court found no evidence that detriment to the public resulted from control of the province's five English-language dailies by the Irving companies.

The Crown also failed to establish or produce evidence of any lessening of competition among the newspapers, which the ruling said was "the only allegation of detriment made by the Crown."

TORONTO (UPI) — The 4,000-member Ontario Provincial Police Association today demanded the federal government crack down of loose bail and parole systems and again start hanging murderers in Canada.

In large advertisements in Toronto and Ottawa newspapers, the association said: "It is high time politicians pay attention to the public. By all current polls the vast majority of Canadians want capital punishment.

"Surely it is time for our politicians to stay out of our courts and uphold the law."

The association said 33 policemen and two prison guards have been slain since 1967.

"But not once was the capital punishment law enacted. The murderers are serving death-commuted sentences of an average of 13½ years. If 13½ years is the probably maximum imprisonment for the ultimate crime against society, is it any wonder that the incidence of violent crime is growing?"

The call came a day after the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities, meeting in London, Ont., also urged Ottawa to retain capital punishment for murder and stop overriding death sentences handed down by judges in murder trials.

A Toronto-area alderman, Ben Nobleman, accused Solicitor-General Warren Allmand of "falling down on the job."

Nobleman said: "I attended a supreme court sitting today and watched as three young men were sentenced to four years each for kicking a 20-year-old to death. The death penalty is the only way to prevent an increase in crime."

In 1967 parliament passed a law prescribing the death penalty only for the killers of policemen and prison guards. But since December, 1962, all death sentences have been commuted by cabinet action.

TRY MACKEREL PIZZA, QUEBECERS TOLD

OTTAWA (CP) — Quebec consumers were advised Wednesday to put mackerel, instead of meat, on their pizzas.

The cooking tip came in the Commons from Fisheries Minister Romeo Leblanc when he was asked if fish inspection standards are higher than meat inspection standards in Quebec.

"Without getting into a debate on other forms of food, I would advise them to use mackerel when they make their pizzas in the future," he told Alexandre Cyr (L-Gaspé).

He said that all fish sold in Quebec is examined by federal inspectors.

Meanwhile, the Meat Packers' Council of Canada reassured Quebec consumers that 90 per cent of the meat sold in that province is federally inspected and safe to eat.

The organization, representing companies handling three-quarters of federally approved meat products, said at a news conference the amount of tainted meat sold is "completely marginal."

The Quebec Police Commission Inquiry into organized crime has heard testimony that millions of pounds of meat unfit for human consumption has been sold in the province.

"The overwhelming proportion of Quebec meat goes through very severe federal inspection and is guaranteed safe for the consumer," said Roland Soucy, the council's director of field services for Eastern Canada.

The Canadian Renderers' Association has telephoned federal and provincial agricultural ministers urging tougher legislation to deal with the disposal of dead and diseased animals.

"We have felt there has been a laxity in the system of having licensed collectors act as the middleman between the farm and the plant," association president Garry Young said later in an interview.

Sask. Party Leaders In Election Stretch

By The Canadian Press
The recurring themes of resource policy and freight rates cropped up Wednesday as Saskatchewan party leaders swung into the last week of campaigning for the June 11 provincial election.

For premier Allan Blakeney, the day was climaxed with a sustained standing ovation at a major evening rally all the way to Ottawa.

Blakeney, echoing the election call of Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed earlier this year, told the crowd of 1,500 he needed a "decisive mandate" to stand up to federal resource policy.

He said that when the time comes to negotiate a new oil price with the federal government, "Prime Minister Trudeau must have no doubt the NDP has an iron-clad mandate from the voters of Saskatchewan."

Meanwhile in Swift Current, Liberal leader Dave Steuart said Saskatchewan is the fourth-richest province in the country, rating just behind British Columbia, Ontario and Quebec.

And although Saskatchewan is richer than Alberta, "we're not a have-not province."

Steuart told a campaign rally here that the province's first resource is its land. He promised the liberals would do away with the Saskatchewan land bank, and join with Ottawa to stabilize agriculture and pass legislation to update the crop insurance program.

The two bills would increase the salary of provincial auditor D. W. Rogers to $43,500 from $37,500, while Ombudsman Randall Ivany would get $34,000, up from the present $30,000, retroactive to Jan. 18.

WINNIPEG (CP) — Harold Joseph Irwin was sentenced, Wednesday to four years in jail for eight holdups committed with a toy cap gun and one with a broken air pistol.

Irwin, 21, no fixed address, had pleaded guilty earlier to nine charges of robbery and was remanded for sentence. Court was told the holdups netted him a total $2,110.

New Deduction Asked

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta government has asked Ottawa to make mortgage interest payments deductible from income tax, Housing Minister Bill Yurko said Wednesday.

In the first emergency debate of the conservative administration in the Alberta legislature — initiated by NDP leader Grant Notley — Yurko said he had asked the federal government to examine the move before the June 23 Federal budget.

EDMONTON (CP) — Legislation increasing salaries paid to the provincial auditor and ombudsmen was given first reading in the Alberta legislature Wednesday.

The two bills would increase the salary of provincial auditor D. W. Rogers to $43,500 from $37,500, while Ombudsman Randall Ivany would get $34,000, up from the present $30,000, retroactive to Jan. 18.

Caterpillar Infestation 'Real Mess'

LAC DU BONNET, Man. (CP) — A teeming horde of ravenous forest tent caterpillars has stripped thousands of acres of trees near this prime recreational area about 40 miles northeast of Winnipeg.

And local residents have expressed concern that the tourist industry will be drastically affected if the crawling mass of black caterpillars is not turned back.

Leo Drabik, reeve of this rural municipality, blames the severe infestation on the provincial government's failure to control the creatures earlier in the year.

We've got a real mess here, a real serious problem. We rely heavily on the tourist business and this is going to hurt us."

The Lac Du Bonnet area is noted for its picturesque scenery and ideal camping facilities. But the caterpillars, which can grow to two inches in length and  $\frac{1}{2}$  inch in width, have swarmed through the area and given the countryside a bleak, mid-winter appearance.

IF YOU NEVER OWNED A Lyman YOU'RE REALLY MISSED THE BOAT!

FARM INSURANCE UP

EDMONTON (CP) — The ravages of hail, frost, drought, and poor harvesting weather in recent years have made the Alberta farmer more insurance conscious, says Agriculture Minister Marvin Moore.

Moore said this week more than 6,000 new applications for the provincial government's all-risk insurance program were handled this spring, a net gain in farmer participation of 35 per cent over last year.

This year about 19,000 farmers will be insured under the program, he said. Total coverage could reach $200 million, up sharply from last year's record of $125 million.

Ferry Funds

'Illegal'
Funds

The provincial government has spent money illegally on the Princess Marguerite and the Rent Review Commission, Liberal MLA Gordon Gibson charged Wednesday in the legislature.

Gibson said a government official has informed him the government received payments for salaries and supplies for the operation of the ferry from a private company called the B.C. Steamship Company.

Gibson said he was also told that two employees of the rent commission have been receiving payments but the legislative authority to continue paying their salaries expired March 31.

He asked Speaker Gordon Dowding to investigate the possibility of illegal spending by the government and take appropriate action if the allegations are found to be true.

Gibson, in raising the issue, said he considered it "a serious matter of privilege," and added "the only protection citizens of this province have is the control of expenditures by this house."

Premier Barrett today labelled Gibson's criticism as "dumb and academic."

"I find the criticism on the Marguerite (financing) is pretty astounding in that it comes from a Liberal member whose colleague represents the city of Victoria whose merchants will benefit from the purchase," he said.

"We had to move quickly to get the vessel in operation." Barrett declined to confirm that some $40,000 was disbursed from a general account to cover supplies for the vessel. Specifics would have to be obtained from Resources Minister Bob Williams, he said, who was tied up in a meeting.

"You can say anything you want if you're against the Marguerite," said the premier. The provincial government faced the problem that the majority of businesses in Victoria were depending on revenue from its passengers.

Gibson said in the house that several thousand dollars have been channelled out of

Turner Queries B.C. Bank

By IAIN HUNTER
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Finance Minister John Turner indicated Wednesday that there is concern here whether the B.C. government has the constitutional authority to set up the proposed Savings and Trust Corp. of B.C.

He said in the Commons that his department is reviewing the attempt by Premier Dave Barrett to set up the institution which would have almost all the powers of a regular bank.

Although he said he doesn't have to consider whether to try to block the establishment of the corporation, he added that Ottawa's refusal to allow former Premier W. A. C. Bennett to set up a provincially-owned B.C. bank in the early 1960s would be a "weighty precedent" in such a consideration.

Sinclair Stevens (PC-York-Simcoe) asked Turner if he agrees with Barrett that the corporation is a "proposed 'comes within provincial constitutional rights.'

"We are reviewing the situation but it doesn't become other than hypothetical until the bill establishing the institution is passed," the finance minister replied.

consolidated revenue to cover Princess Marguerite costs.

"The only protection this house has is the honesty of financial reporting," said Gibson, and the payments are not included in the spending estimates of the government.

It appears that without the legislature's knowledge a federally chartered private company has been established to oversee operations or the Princess Marguerite, he said.

The province acquired the Princess Marguerite (for $20,000) through the Bell Protection Fund, he said, as part of a package deal which included purchase of eight acres on the Inner Harbour.

The MLA did not disagree with the purchase arrangements but questioned how salaries are to be paid.

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Food prices have been moving sharply upwards since late March and this will be apparent in the next two consumer price index announcements by Statistics Canada, Beryl Plumptre, chairman of the Food Price Review Board disclosed Wednesday.

Costs are currently providing the most explosive fuel to Canada's inflation. Some of these costs are domestic in origin, such as demands for increased salaries and wages in the food industry, she said.

"These reflect similarly outrageous — often plain greedy — income demands in other sectors," said Mrs. Plumptre. She spoke to the Canadian Grocery Distributors' Institute in Quebec City.

The board's analysis of the impact of salaries and wages on food prices in 1974 showed there was cause for alarm, she said. Its preliminary analysis for 1975 suggests that the process is continuing and perhaps becoming worse.

"There has been little if any evidence of the discipline in individual and group economic decisions which the board called for last September," she said.

The national game of "catching up and keeping up" will continue to affect food prices.

If the current demands of British Columbia retail food industry unions are typical, food prices will increase sharply even if the next harvest yields the finest crops in history, said Mrs. Plumptre. The cause went back to the primary producer level rather than to any reductions in costs or returns in the processing and distribution channels.

In Vancouver George Johnston, president of the British Columbia Meatcutters Union which is seeking wage increases of up to 76 per cent, said Mrs. Plumptre is not competent to speak about the effects of his union's wage demands on inflation.

Johnston said she is not conversant with the collective bargaining process and machinery, particularly in B.C.

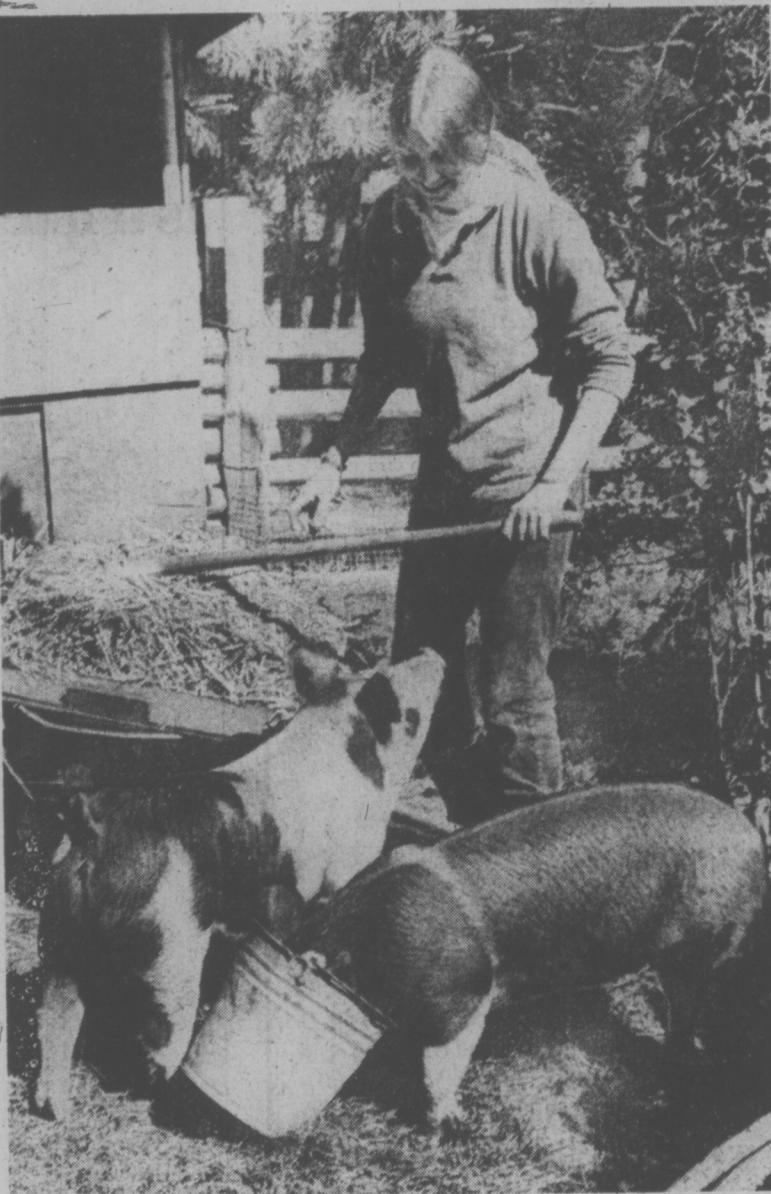

"The proposals submitted to the industry were formulated democratically by people on the job, not by union leaders," he said. "If she thinks leadership determines the proposals, it is an indication of her non-comprehension."

Where decreases in retail food prices occurred in recent months the case could be traced back to a decline in prices for unprocessed agricultural commodities. The cause went back to the pri-

STRIKE LOOMS AT DOCKYARD

RMC Dockyard officials have been told by Dockyard Trades and Labor Council to expect the possibility of a strike in the 900-man ship repair unit of federal government civilian employees.

The national organization has members in naval dockyards on both coasts, for whom contract negotiations began in March and have proceeded to the conciliation board stage.

Victoria members took a strike vote this week but have not released the outcome. The step came on the heels of a report recommended by the group's negotiating committee.

Rugby Post to City Man

By MAX LOW

Times Staff

Don Burgess of Victoria is to be Canada's first full-time technical coaching director for rugby, the Times learned Wednesday.

The official announcement is expected to be made by sponsors Carling-O'Keefe during a two-day meeting in Toronto on Monday and Tuesday.

Appointment of Burgess,

who will be based in Victoria and who will be responsible for setting up a national coaching scheme, and of an Ottawa-based director (who will be named at a later date) follows the recent upgrading by Sport Canada of the game of rugby from second-class to a "first-class" sport.

Burgess, one of the country's most experienced players and coaches, was selected out of 47 applicants from Canada, New Zealand and Wales (including well-known Welsh coach Gwyn Evans).

A keen rugby statistician and historian who has written a thesis on the history of the game in B.C., Burgess has represented Victoria Crimson Tide, B.C. and Canada in the fullback berth. A fit 44, he still turns out regularly for Oak Bay Wanderers in Victoria Rugby Union matches. He is president of the Victoria Union.

Burgess himself declined to confirm or deny his appointment but an official in the Saanich School District office confirmed that Burgess has been granted a one-year leave of absence from Parkland High School where he teaches. The coaching job is initially a one-year appointment.

Canadian Rugby Union president Peter Clarke of Victoria was not available for comment. He's on an overseas tour.

Eight-Year Shutdown Ends As Suez Canal Re-Opened

PORT SAID, Egypt — President Anwar Sadat reopened the Suez Canal today after an eight-year shutdown, hauling the waterway as a "tributary of peace and a channel of prosperity and co-operation among men."

But he said that the canal is also a reminder to "friendly people everywhere that cherished parts of Arab lands are still suffering under foreign occupation and Arab people are enduring the anguish of forced exile."

Egypt is determined "to perform the sacred duty of liberating these lands and recovering usurped Arab rights," he said. The ceremony marked the eighth anniversary of the 1967 Arab-Israeli war that closed the canal.

In Tel Aviv, Israeli Transport Minister Gad Yaacobi said Egypt has pledged in writing to permit Israeli cargo through the canal, and that a Liberian ship headed for the canal with sugar for Israel will be a "test case."

LEGISLATION CUTS DRIVER PENALTIES

Fines for motorists caught driving without a valid driver's certificate will be reduced under legislation brought in Wednesday by Transport Minister Bob Strachan.

Under existing legislation people without valid certificates subject to a fine not less than $250 or imprisonment for a period not less than three months.

The new bill — amendments to the Motor-Vehicle Act — will change the penalties to not more than $250 and not more than three months imprisonment.

Strachan said the legislation makes the fines "a little more realistic" and is part of the government's plan to phase out the certificates.

Egyptian army went on to regain the northern half of the east bank and got the rest in a disengagement agreement after the October war.

The canal had been closed since Israel took the whole of the Sinai Desert up to the east bank of the 103-mile waterway in the June, 1967, six-day war.

Indians Keep Rail Blockade

FORT ST. JAMES (CP) — A spokesman for the Stuart-Trembleur Lake Indian Band said Wednesday that the band's blockade of the British Columbia Railway north of here will continue until at least June 25.

Danny Alexis said at this community 75 miles northwest of Prince George that the fence blocking the B.C.'s line passing through the band's property will remain until the band gets satisfaction from the government in its dispute with the railway.

The blockade caused the closure Tuesday of the Silvacan Resources Sawmill on Takla Lake, 100 miles north of the disputed right-of-way. About 120 employees of the mill were indefinitely laid off.

Meanwhile, in Vancouver, Fred House was re-elected Wednesday as president of the British Columbia Association of Non-Status Indians but will not get his annual salary of $17,000.

House sought and received support for the rejection of all federal government funding by the provincial organization that represents 60,000 Indians. He will receive expense money as he did previously.

Under the new policy, staff will work without government funds at little or no pay.

Doris Ronnenberg, who campaigned against rejection of government funds, was elected vice-president of the association.

VANCOUVER (CP) — A British expert says a rare Scottish sheep would be ideal to raise in British Columbia, and he'd like to import some.

Lawrence Alderson, technical consultant to Britain's Rare Breeds Survival Trust, made the comment Monday to members of the University of B.C. animal science department.

He said that the North Ronaldsay sheep, considered an endangered species, is found only in the Orkney Islands, off the north coast of Scotland.

Alderson said the sheep eat nothing but seaweed, and the

COURT SQUEEZES 'LEMON' DEALER

BURNABY (CP) — A British Columbia Supreme Court has ordered a car dealer to refund the full purchase price of a 1974 car that had chronic malfunctions.

Court was told that Western Pacific Tank Lines Ltd. paid $8,258 for a 1974 Chrysler New Yorker from Brentwood Dodge Ltd. The car was bought for company president John Axen.

Mr. Justice K. E. Meredith noted that among other problems, the temperature gauge didn't work, doors didn't open properly, power cruise control failed, windshield wipers were activated by the headlight switch and vice versa; the radio malfunctioned; the tape-deck wouldn't change channels and the handle fell off the right front door.

The judge said that none of the defects was serious enough to take the car off the road, but "I think the plaintiff was entitled to expect that the car, including the luxuries with which it was equipped, would be operational or at least capable of operation."

Plant manager Bob Johnson said the company "has no desire to move out of the province. It wants to stay in B.C."

VANCOUVER (CP) — Directors of the Pacific National Exhibition decided Wednesday to ask the City of Vancouver to reconsider its rejection of Sunday thoroughbred racing at Exhibition Park. An earlier bid had been unsuccessfully submitted by the B.C. Jockey Club, operator of the racing facility.

SURREY (CP) — Surrey Mayor Bill Vander Zalm said Wednesday the provincial government has not consulted Surrey officials about its idea of storing natural gas underground in the municipality.

"This seems to be the place where they put all their oddball proposals," Vander Zalm said. "What irks me is that they make all these proposals and never consult me."

Court was told the car was returned to the dealer to have defects corrected. However, after this was done, several problems reappeared, and others began.

The car was finally returned to the dealer and abandoned there.

Village Tax Base Tripled by Mine

FRASER LAKE (CP) — Mayor Earl Skahns of this village 100 miles west of Prince George said Wednesday the provincial cabinet has approved inclusion of the Endako Mine and the 14 miles of road to it within village boundaries. Skahns said "the move will triple the village's tax base and allow improvements in fire protection, the arena and sewage facilities. The mine previously provided the $350,000 arena and helped with the sewer and water systems costs."

Frozen Food Strike Ends

VANCOUVER (CP) — Members of the Canadian Food and Allied Workers union voted Tuesday to end a 13-week strike that tied up 20 to 30 million pounds of frozen food.

The 28 workers, members of Local 212, ratified a 13-month contract from last March 1 giving them a $1.50-an-hour increase.

Previous base rate was $3.83.

Union negotiator George Johnston said the settlement also has provision for a cent hourly freeze-work differential and "substantial improvements in all areas of fringe benefits."

Among them is four hours

accumulated time off for every 40 hours worked, up from two hours.

The workers went on strike at the beginning of March seeking the $1.50-an-hour raise.

Sélement came only a week after the British Columbia Federation of Agriculture appealed through Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich for government intervention.

It came quickly with the assistance of mediator Charles Stewart as agricultural officials worried about new catch in the company's three Greater Vancouver freezers.

Frozen crops include peas, beans, corn, strawberries, and raspberries.

WELFARE FRAUD

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — The wife of a North Vancouver man who became embroiled in a dispute with his municipality's welfare department last year was convicted Wednesday of fraud involving more than $6,500.

Mrs. J. Angus Philip was found guilty of having defrauded North Vancouver City between February, 1971, and

The Magic Ingredients Were Missing In Sugar Daddy Riggs' Final Fling

By MAX LOW
Times Staff

Veteran tennis hustler Bobby Riggs flew to Calgary today after two days of almost non-stop talking some fun tennis and a match which should never have happened.

After going through his well-rehearsed male chauvinist patter for the benefit of newspapermen and radio and television announcers, the one-time Wimbledon champ took on Attorney-General Alex Macdonald and Oak Bay Mayor Brian Smith on the rain-slicked lawn in front of the Empress Hotel at noon Wednesday.

Bobby won that 6-3. But it didn't really matter. What the crowd of about 300 had come to see was fun — and that's what they got.

With Riggs gaily decked out

in his bright yellow track suit sporting his adopted nickname, Sugar Daddy, Smith wearing plus fours and red socks and Macdonald in a kilt and sporran, the game couldn't help but be a comic affair and the crowd got plenty of laughs.

However, while umpire Garde Gardom, independent MLA for Vancouver-Point Grey, struggled to keep score amidst the tomfoolery, Riggs demonstrated that he's still able to put his famous "stuff" on the ball with a variety of spins, lobs, drop-shots and slices.

Asked about the match later in the legislature, Macdonald said "I would not want at any time to humiliate an older man." The attorney-general is 56. Riggs is 57.

The same can't be said,

There was fun, too, Wednesday night at Memorial Arena — at least for part of the time.

Riggs clowned through a version of "strip-tennis" with attractive Ann Graham and Jean Shaw prior to Victoria Shamrocks' Western Lacrosse Association match with Coquitlam Adanacs and then tried his hand at scoring on goalkeepers Skip Chapman and George Grover of the Rocks and Dan Bartsch of the Adanacs.

He didn't do too well against them, either with a lacrosse stick or a tennis racket, being stopped on all 10 shots by the Victoria 'keepers and scoring three times against Bartsch.

But it was all good fun and the crowd, especially the kids, loved it.

The same can't be said,

though, for the rather funless fiasco that followed the lacrosse game when Riggs turned back the challenge of Oak Bay Tennis Club's Tony Simnett, winning a $1,000 challenge match 5-3.

Most of the crowd of 3,533 fans (the Rocks' biggest by far this season) stayed behind but there was a steady trickle to the exits when they realized they weren't going to get either good tennis or good fun.

Once, near the end, Bobby relaxed and when a lob by his opponent went just outside the baseline, he tiptoed past it like a cat and twirled his racket at the same time.

The crowd erupted in a roar. You'd think he'd just done something magic.

That was what they wanted — entertainment. And they didn't get it.

perately needed to win to stay in the match.

Those who went hoping to see live the kind of tennis they watch at home on TV were disappointed. The match never reached a high enough standard to be exciting.

Province Picks Up Slick Tab

The provincial government agreed today to pick up the tab for cleaning up three-quarters of a mile of Mill Bay shoreline in the Saanich Inlet which has been fouled with thick oil sludge since Friday.

The government action was taken after Cowichan Regional Bar chairman Ralph Keir complained the district had neither money, staff nor know-how with which to handle the mop-up operation.

Barney Lane, Provincial Emergency Program co-ordinator for the cleanup admitted the government was setting a precedent by agreeing to pay the $5,000 needed to clean the beach, which is within a provincial recreation reserve.

The ministry of transport is responsible for cleanup of oil spills at sea and in the water but, once onshore, minor spills become the responsibility of the municipality or district in which they occur. In the case of a major spill, however, all government resources would be on call.)

"This particular incident could lead to some meaningful dialogue between the provincial and federal governments," Lane observed, explaining that PEP is only a coordinating body.

Lane said the spill was probably caused by a ship pumping her bilges in the area and predicted this kind of spill will become more common around Vancouver Island.

"Vancouver has tightened up restrictions so much that ships are waiting until they get over here (to pump bilges)," he said.

CANADIAN transportation man of the year is Ray Hadfield, 60, of 909 Pendergast, who will receive the award Sunday from Transport Minister Jean Marchand in a ceremony at Ottawa. Hadfield was superintendent of the B.C. motor-vehicle branch for 10 years and is responsible for introducing the motor vehicle inspection system and drivers licence photographs.

NO CHARGES AGAINST SCs

No charges will be laid against the Social Credit party for applying for summer student employment funds earmarked for small businesses by the provincial government.

The attorney general's department has decided Socreds were acting foolishly rather than criminally in trying to get government funds for political purposes.

"I'm not approving the propriety of what happened," said attorney general Alex Macdonald today. "... but as to whether there was an infraction of the law, it's not there."

"It was so transparent it wouldn't fool a child of three," said Macdonald.

To lay a charge of fraud against the party, its application would have had to actually "fool" the government and Macdonald said no one would have been fooled by the application.

The matter was referred to Macdonald's department after it was discovered that Social Credit constituency offices had applied for student employment funds to hire people to work for them during the rest of the executive.

Two days later Wilde wrote all members of the constituency association expressing concern about the "potential scandals" in the association.

On Monday of this week the association met again and elected a new executive.

Wilde, her husband and two sons tore up their membership cards.

Since the government rejected the applications, said McCarthy, it shows they do not support the principles and therefore should not include it in the elections act.

An Exchange of Letters On a Very Old Subject

Miss Margaret Bridger, of our town, has written me the following letter:

"Dear Sir: I read with abhorrence your statement that "in China, no less than in Victoria or Moscow or New York or any other place you care to name, sex, on any scale of ten, is number one. Always has been always will be."

"Such a pronouncement, coming from one who, it appears, is a self-appointed authority on such matters, may do more to influence readers in a detrimental way than all the insidious advertising you profess to be deplored. Have you no knowledge of any mental or spiritual planes which are able to place and keep sex in its proper and no doubt legitimate place in life?

"It was further revoluted by your next paragraph which appears to equate sex with love, or the expression of love. The whole paragraph reflects an ignorance, or naivete, which is most incompatible with your worldly-wise pose. When sex, used as broadly as you appear to be using the term, even conceived by even the most ingenuous of our "sophisticated" society, equated with "the motivation of love between men and women, whether it is to be expressed in a physical or cerebral way."

"I suggest you consult a dictionary before you blandly toss off your erroneous dictums — there may be some misguided souls among us who actually believe what you write.

Disgusted,
(Miss) Margaret Bridger."

I have written Miss Bridger the following letter:

"Dear Miss Bridger:

"Your interesting letter reached me at a time when I've been in the process of re-discovering Ernest Hemingway, reading, after a good many years, his novels and short stories. If it is not already on your shelves may I recommend A Farewell to Arms, one of the great love stories of our time. More than anything I might write this fine, enduring novel puts into perspective the relationship between love and sex which, obviously, I failed to do in my column.

"There are, of course, any number of authors, philosophers, pundits, scientists and thinkers of one kind or another, both men and women, who might be quoted to support the notion that sex is the strongest force in our lives. Haveock Ellis, for example, observed that 'The omnipresence process of sex, as it is woven into the whole texture of our man's or woman's body, is the pattern of all the process of our life'. It is really as simple as that, Miss Bridger.

"But it is all there much truer and more simply in Hemingway's story, a story of a man and a woman who love each other in a time of war and whose sex life is a perfectly natural expression of that love. I can think of no other work of fiction — and certainly not in the novels of today — in which it is expressed so beautifully.

"If, as I gather from your letter, you are simply concerned with the commercial exploitation of sex or the immature, leering approach to it that's so common today, then it's obvious that we agree. But that is not what I said in the column you abhor. I was saying only that sex is our strongest motivation, that without it there would not be the thoughts and aspirations and sacrifices that have existed since the world began. When you speak of 'mental or spiritual planes' you simply cannot divorce them from the process that, as Ellis said, is woven into the texture of every man and woman.

"Even to suggest that it is an evil of our lives rather than a force for good is a denial of the power of love since there is no way to distinguish between the two when a man and woman are involved. We have made it a cheap and exploitative thing by this attitude of denial. Together, they make the most natural, the finest and the most enabling of all life's discoveries.

"I hope that you will read or re-read A Farewell to Arms and enjoy, as I did, if only vicariously, the story of a relationship that rises above war, revolutions and the petty stupidities of the human animal.

"Yours humbly,
J. Scott."

She Lost to the 'Machine'

Shirley Wilde said today she fought a "political machine" within the Esquimalt Social Credit constituency association during her term as association president.

Wilde, who resigned as president after she lost a confidence vote at a May 12 membership meeting, said the association started from when she defeated Jack Fry for the presidency last October.

A four-man group within the association formed that worked against her and started taking actions on behalf of the association without her approval, Wilde said.

She said the association executive agreed unanimously at a February meeting that money raised by a Feb. 26 wine and cheese party should not be used for a storefront constituency office until an election was called.

Yet after the party, the $1,600 it raised was placed in a separate association bank account by an executive member, without her authorization, said Wilde.

Wilde said she read her president's report, outlining the areas where she felt her authority was being undermined, then turned the chair over to vice-president Byron Barker.

refused to enter either because they are unconstitutional.

She said she was also disturbed to learn that an executive member on his own had applied for provincial funds to pay the wages of students to be employed in the storefront office.

Everything came to a head at a May 12 membership meeting.

Wilde said she read her president's report, outlining the areas where she felt her authority was being undermined, then turned the chair over to vice-president Byron Barker.

"The meeting was just completely uncontrollable that night," she said.

A confidence vote in the president was taken and she lost 106-60, she said. Wilde then resigned, as did the rest of the executive.

Two days later Wilde wrote all members of the constituency association expressing concern about the "potential scandals" in the association.

On Monday of this week the association met again and elected a new executive.

50% Increase in Fares Claimed on Sooke Run

Victoria Times

THURSDAY, JUNE 5, 1975

SECOND SECTION

To my mind it amounts to a very slick con job," added McQueen.

He said the $34 monthly pass formerly available to Sooke commuters under the private South West operation has been scrapped, and travellers now have to pay $2.60 for the daily round trip.

Based on 20 working days in June, that number of trips will cost $52 — as increase of $18.

McQueen said Sooke commuters who met earlier this week to discuss the problem were "hostile" to the government on the fares policy, and even discussed some sort of boycott action involving a car pool to back up their protests.

Resulting from that meeting,

ing, Ronald Dumont, Sooke's director on the Capital Regional board, will meet today with Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer to request that the monthly pass system be restored.

McQueen said all he has been able to find out so far is that the government service may introduce a fare concession giving 10 trips for the price of eight.

A spokesman in Lorimer's office said an announcement on the matter will be made shortly. He said the finding of transit officials was that a pass allowing a reduction of more than 50 per cent on the standard fare was unrealistically generous.

A delegation from the Victoria Symphony warned city aldermen today that unless the organization receives strong financial support from municipalities it will have to drastically cut back its program of bringing music into Victoria-area schools.

But one member of Victoria's finance committee, Ald. Clyde Savage, said he fails to see why the cost of such a program — an estimated $17,600 for 1975 — should be borne by municipalities and not by school boards.

In any case, he added, recalled the absence of any similar frills in his own school days, "it's really not what you go to school for."

"I can appreciate you are bringing this cultural thing to young people, but at a cost of $17,600..."

Savage said he would rather see the money used in more useful ways: to give concerts for the enjoyment of senior citizens, for example.

Symphony officials said after their presentation that local school boards had not actually declined financial support, but an adjustment in fiscal policies had apparently redirected money for such purposes to be used at the discretion of individual principals.

Vice-president Nick Pearson said principals want to see continued the program of full orchestral concerts and performances by string ensembles, but "we simply can't do it on the haphazard basis of $25 or $30 per visit."

Of the Symphony's $427,000 budget this year it has asked for $40,000 from municipalities. In early May the Intermunicipal Committee recommended a $25,000 grant, representing a 12 per cent increase on the $21,732 approved last year.

Victoria's share of the 1974 grant, under the intermunicipal cost-sharing formula, was $8,646. That would rise to about $16,000 if the full $40,000 requested this year were applied.

Society treasurer Peter Dovazio noted the budget shortfall now stands at $15,000, notwithstanding the fact that the budget was already severely trimmed to the point where it was "almost an accountant's budget."

But just because the school board attitude was "narrow minded" it didn't mean civic leaders should adopt a similar stance he added.

The committee finally recommended against the request.
